Poland Ousts Party Leader

Food Rioting Forces Purge

Times News Service

WARSAW — Five top members of the Polish government, including leader Wladyslaw Gomulka, have been purged in the wake of widespread riots against a government-ordered boost in food prices.

Calm began to return today to the rebellious cities with the appointment of Edward Gierek as leader of the nation's Communist party.

He immediately began talks to try to straighten out the country's economy.

Gierek has called for a reappraisal "of the ill-considered economic policies" which set off the bloody rioting last week.

Gierek used the phrase "ill-considred" in a speech to a plenary session of the party's central committee Sunday which forced Gomulka to resign after 14 years as party secretary.

The central committee also fired four members of the 12-man ruling politburo, including President Marian Spychalski, who remains, however, as head of state.

Among those dismissed was Boleslaw Jaszczuk, 57, responsible for carrying out economic reforms aimed at modernizing Poland's stagnant economy through a transition to more selective, intensive development of key industries.

Jaszczuk, a former ambassador to Russia, was regarded as the main advocate of sharp pre-Christmas food price increases a week ago, which ignited smouldering resentment over other aspects of the reforms and led to strikes and street clashes in Baltic coastal towns.

Warsaw radio said workers in riot-torn Gdansk and Gdynia had returned to work today but did not mention Szczecin, hit hardest by the disorders. Telephone lines to Gdansk remained down and its airport closed to regular traffic a week after the riots began there.

GIVES PARTY LINE

Troops were believed still occupying Szczecin, and a source reported from Gdansk that tanks were on the streets and a nighttime curfew remained in force. Damage at Gdansk alone was estimated at $3.5 million.

In a radio and television address after his election as new party first secretary, Gierek, a 57-year-old former miner, said the party would give a difficult and self-critical but clear and true answer to the question of how this disaster happened.

Some causes were the result of real difficulties but others were due to "ill-considered conceptions of economic policy" which would have to be removed, he said in what appeared to be an obvious criticism of Jaszczuk.

Agnew to Step Down If Better Man Shows

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew says he is willing to step down in 1972 if a vice-presidential candidate comes along with more political appeal, but that President Nixon "gives me every indication that he approves of the courses of action that I have taken."

Agnew made the statement in a copyrighted story by Akron Beacon Jornal writers who talked to him Friday in Akron.

"I'm not an insecure man. I don't worry from day to day whether the president is looking at me with a fishy eye."

Clean Air Program Proposed

A province-wide air pollution study commissioned by the provincial government has called for a broad prevention and control program to keep air pollution problems from reaching their "high potential."

Key recommendation appears to be that the attack on air pollution be carried out initially at the provincial level, with regions and municipalities given a share of responsibility later.

MORE RESEARCH

Establishment of air quality standards, a big increase in research, including a province-wide monitoring program, and an effort to find alternatives to burning of municipal and industrial refuse are among the recommendations.

The study, carried out by the B.C. Research Council, was presented to the government last week and is currently under study.

It was commissioned last Jan. 15.

"Air pollution problems do exist in the province of British Columbia and, more importantly, there is high potential for additional pollution problems," the report said.

"The majority of present problems are localized in area and of limited duration and severity; however, continued and rapid growth of some areas in the absence of adequate control measures will create more intense community and regional problems."

HAVE A CHOICE

The report says the provincial government policy faces a choice between an immediate moderate-cost and largely preventive program or costly "more drastic corrective action" in a generation or two when "a more serious and generalized air pollution situation develops."

Lack of information in a number of study areas, including pulp mill air pollution, was cited as a major difficulty in conducting the study.

A central information centre for air pollution is recommended.

LESSER PROBLEM

Not surprisingly, the study concluded that Victoria presents a lesser pollution problem than Vancouver, the other metropolitan area in the province, because of lesser industrial activity and higher prevailing winds.

Vancouver has "an air pollution problem similar to that of San Francisco and Los Angeles but not nearly as severe or continuous throughout the year."

Small cities in a valley location with one or more large industries will have to battle both the large sources of air pollution—frequently "obnoxious odors, soiling corrosive chemical fall-out and reduced visibility"—and also the non-industrial sources because atmospheric inversion in such locations can trap all pollutants and create a problem despite limited population.

The report says that most of the area of the province has virtually no man-made pollution. Forest fires, emission of hydrocarbons from vegetation and wind erosion

Tucson Hotel Fire Kills 28; Youth Held

TUCSON, Ariz. (CP) — Juvenile court petitions were filed today charging a 16-year-old youth with trespass in a $2.5-million fire which killed 28 persons and injured 27 in a downtown hotel Sunday. An arson charge was also filed but later withdrawn pending further investigation.

The youth was taken into custody near the scene of the blaze, and questioned by police.

The petition identified him as Louis C. Taylor, four-time parolee from the State Industrial School for Boys.

Ben Birdsall, Pima County Superior Court juvenile judge, said Taylor "told us a number of different stories about the fire.

"He said he was at the scene and saw the fire start, but claims he saw another boy do it."

Several survivors of the flames which raced through the upper half of the 12-storey Pioneer International Hotel said they had smelled a volatile substance in the corridors.

The fire in the 41-year-old building broke out on the sixth floor and flared through hallways and staircases, penning about 60 persons in their rooms with no way out except through the windows.

One woman plunged to her death from the seventh floor.

"I'm still here—I'm still here!" witnesses said she shouted shortly before making the fatal leap.

The dead in the dawn blaze were mostly wealthy Mexicans and their families who came to Tucson for Christmas shopping.

They were all from Sonora which lies across the border from Arizona 65 miles south of here.

They included the wife and five children of Maj. Francisco Luken, chief of Sonora's state judicial police.

Also killed was Dr. Jose Jesus Antillon, one of Mexico's most prominent cardiologists, his wife and their three children.

Five grandchildren of the former governor of Sonora, Ignacio Soto, died in the fire. Their parents survived.

Harold Steinfeld, 82, builder of the hotel and owner of a department store, died with his wife in their penthouse apartment.

Many of the survivors said they awoke with smoke pouring into their rooms.

WINNING struggle for life is six-year-old Karyn Prestwich, of North Forks, Idaho, who was mistaken for a deer by a hunter Nov. 6 and shot in the stomach. Karyn will be able to enjoy Christmas with her family. See story on Page 2.

KOREAN SUCCESS STORY is checked by Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, director of the Unitarian Service Committee. Han Ho Ung, 26, lost a leg when he stepped on a land mine. With USC help, Han was trained as a watchmaker and now has his own shop and supports his family well. Help is urgently sought for the USC's Children of Asia Christmas fund. Vote Age Drops

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States Supreme Court approved today the lowering of the voting age to 18 from 21 on all U.S. national elections. But it said that Congress had no legal right to order states to reduce the voting age for their elections.

Davis Enters Race For Robarts' Post

Times News Services

TORONTO — Education Minister William Davis, 41, today declared his candidacy for the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party and immediately became the favorite to succeed Premier John Robarts.

Robarts earlier announced he will resign at a convention Feb. 10-12.

A powerful, 50-man committee headed by Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton as campaign manager, will support Davis.

The number of legislature members who have already declared openly for Mr. Davis indicates the 11-year veteran of the legislature will be the foremost candidate in the leadership race.

A pleasant-spoken, witty lawyer and former assistant Crown attorney for Peel County, just west of Toronto, Davis has seemed out out for the premiership since he was first elected in 1959.

He was the youngest member of the legislature—at 30—when he won Peel South for the first time. The riding contains his home and birthplace, Brampton.

Davis became education minister in 1962 and in 1964 was given a second and related portfolio as minister of university affairs.

LAPORTE INQUEST AGAIN POSTPONED

MONTREAL (CP) — An inquest into the death of kidnap victim Pierre Laporte was postponed for the second time today without any witnesses being called.

Crown Prosecutor Yves Fortier requested the postponement to Monday, Jan. 4, for the same reason advanced Dec. 1. Prosecutor Jacques Ducros said then that testimony of witnesses might interfere with the work of police.

TORONTO COUPLE WINS SUPER IRISH PRIZE

$486,000 Christmas Gift!

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto couple got the biggest Christmas present of their lives today—$486,000.

Bob and Bessie Jacobs were awakened at 4 a.m. today by a telephone call from Ireland telling them they had won $200,000 as a super prize in the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes.

The prize was for the first ticket drawn out of the sweeps drum. The sweep's jackpot normally is $120,500 for a ticket on the winning horse, but for this race—the Sweeps Hurdles scheduled Dec. 28—a super prize was added.

The super prize will remain a feature of all Irish Sweepstake draws in the future. The new departure is in observance of the 40th anniversary of the draw.

BESSIE JACOBS

The official results of the draw have not yet been released by hospital officials in Ireland, but the Jacobs got the good news by telephone.

Jacobs is a $190-a-week printer and both were numb with shock after receiving the news.

"I can't believe it," said Mrs. Jacobs. "I just can't believe it."

The winning ticket was in her name.

Jacobs said he did not know if he would leave his job.

'We just want to live a normal life," he said.

Mrs. Jacobs, who said she has been buying lottery and sweeps tickets for the last 20 years, was too

Ice Gives Way

BURNS LAKE (CP) — Jeffrey Leo Molinairi, 15, was killed Sunday when the tractor he was operating fell through the ice on an unnamed lake on his family's farm about 15 miles south of here.

Police said the youth was clearing an area for a skating rink when the accident happened.

excited to go to her $54-a-week office job today.

Neighbors of the Jacobs said the family has had uncanny luck recently in winning various lotteries and draws.

One neighbor, Isabel Goodenough, said Jacobs won a backyard barbeque in a draw last summer and Mrs. Jacobs won a refrigerator four years ago. Their daughter, Cathy, 23, won a color television set earlier this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs were unsure how they would spend the money.

Jacobs, 43, said he would pay off the $8,000 still owing on the three-room bungalow he bought in suburban Rexdale for $19,000 in 1957, "but beyond that I just don't know."

Mrs. Jacobs said she had "been wanting some new rugs for the house for ever so long." She also said the family might take a trip to Florida.

In addition to Cathy, the Jacobs have two other children, Robert, 20, and Brian, 16. All the children and Cathy's year-old daugher, Vicky, were at home when the news came in from Dublin.

After the award of the bonanza prize the draw went on as usual for the special hurdles race to be run at Fairyhouse, 15 miles from Dublin, next Monday.

The prize fund for the draw provides for 15 units of $30,000 each. Each of the 43 horses entered is drawn 15 times.

Holders of the 15 tickets on the winner win $125,000. The second-place horse gives ticket-holders $50,000 and the third-place horse $25,000.

Those who draw horses whether actual runners or non-starters win $1,060.

There are also 50 cash prizes of $1,600 and 3,450 prizes of $250.

'Hasti-Notes' Taking Their Time

Matson Lodge resident, Mrs. Vinetta Bellamy, 81, has made a pact with her long-time friend in Oliver, B.C., Mrs. Gwen Walling, not to exchange gifts this year.

But Mrs. Bellamy will get one anyway. It's the one that was mailed to her last year.

A small package of "Hasti-Notes," the gift fell victim to what a post office official describes as "empty bag failure."

With its mailing point only 300 miles from Victoria, the package was discovered in Ottawa, 2,979 miles away from its destination Friday.

The official explained it was probably left in the mail sack, which was put in storage until needed for this year's Christmas rush. On its first trip out, the parcel was among a cargo of mail destined for Ottawa.

Ottawa Citizen reporter Burt Heward wrote a public letter in his paper's Saturday edition and Mrs. Bellamy heard of her parcel's discovery from a story in the Times that day.

Today Mrs. Bellamy is eagerly waiting the arrival of the overdue gift.

A local post office official says the parcel will be returned, care of the Victoria postmaster, who is determined it won't undergo another year-long rerouting.

Mrs. Bellamy intends to use at least one of her Hasti-Notes to tell her friend that: "Neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their apointed rounds" . . . most of the time.

party chief then appeared to turn his fire on Gomulka when he said that the iron rule of party policy must be "to respect the principle of collective decision-making and democracy in the life of the party and the activity of the supreme authorities."

Political observers said the obvious implication was that his predecessor had neglected this rule.

Informed sources said the 65-year-old Gomulka had grown increasingly irascible and intolerant of opposition in recent years, and was involved in a stormy clash with Gierek at a session of the politburo which approved the increase in food prices, which Gierek opposed and Gomulka backed.

An official communique said Gomulka submitted his resignation at Sunday's plenary session of the 90-member central committee because of a serious circulatory ailment affecting his vision and requiring long hospital treatment.

But political observers had no doubt that he and his four politburo associates—chief party ideologist Zenon Kliszko, Spychalski, party organizational secretary Ryszard Strzelecki, and Jaszczuk—were being held responsible for last week's disorders.

Gierek's success in keeping his home province quiet was seen as a key to his promotion. As bloody riots shook Gdansk, Gdynia, Sopot, Czczecin and Slupsk—shipbuilding, seaport and industrial centres in the north—workers remained quiet in industrial Silesia, where violence was widespread during the bread riots that brought Gomulka to power in 1956.

Last week's disturbances began after the Gomulka regime raised prices 17 to 20 per cent on food, clothing and other essentials in a prelude to a new five-year plan that was to begin next month.

The circumstances of Gomulka's fall were ironic. He was swept to power in October, 1956, on a wave of liberalization following riots in Poznan earlier the same year when thousands of factory workers demonstrated for better living conditions and an end to Soviet control.

INTO OBLIVION

Now he has been pushed into political oblivion by shipyard workers fighting militia in the streets of Gdansk and other Baltic coastal cities because they felt his policies were striking at their living standards.

Three of Gomulka's close political associates who survived the purge are Jozef Cyrankiewiz, 59, Foreign Minister Stefan Jedrychowski, 60, and labor union chief Ignacy Loga-Sowinski, 56.

The most important newcomer to the politburo is Mieczyslaw Moczar, 57, regarded as the leader of a military nationalist group in the party known as "Partisans," mostly veterans of the wartime Communist underground.

SHORTEST DAY OF YEAR

Today is the shortest day of the year with the winter solstice, when the sun appears to reach the farthest point south, set for 10:36 p.m.

In pre-Christian days this would be a day of celebration, marking the death and birth of a new god to pagan believers.

Modified Arctic air moved over the province this weekend, bringing cooler air, a mixture of rain and snow to lower Vancouver Island and snow in the interior.

Another storm moving across Alaska is expected to bring cloud and another dumping of mixed rain and snow Tuesday afternoon.

Temperatures are expected to remain in the 30s.

Victoria was the favored spot of Canada Sunday, snug in the highest recorded temperature of 39 degrees.

In grim contrast, residents of Prince Albert were faced with a chilly 46 below.

dusts comprise pollution in these areas.

Co-ordinated province-wide program of prevention and control should set both air quality standards for specific contaminants and also long long-range objectives for air quality based on available scientific knowledge.

Specific performance standards for emission rates of "the major and complex industries, such as chemical wood pulping, and non-ferrous smelting" should be established as well as general emission standards for all pollution sources.

UPGRADE STANDARDS

The report appears to sympathize with the problems of existing industrial plants in meeting standards which it recommends should be continually upgraded.

"Where practical, the revised standards should be applied to existing industrial plants," the report says.

- A solid-waste management program in provincial hands is needed with emphasis on finding alternatives to the burning of waste, particularly in cities of 10,000 or more. The report says lack of qualified personnel may prevent "junior governments" from carrying out this responsibility, currently given to them under the Pollution Control Act.
- Continued effort to find alternatives to slash burning should be made and maximum use of wood residues for purposes other than fuel should be sought.
- "Optimum utilization of hydroelectric power is recommended, and any future thermo-electric plants should be subject to stringent requirements with respect to air pollution."
- More study of mining and contributions to pollution is needed but the amount of pollution from these is likely "substantial" because such operations are large and growing.
- Future port planning should take account of the dusting potential of bulk shipments of commodities such as grain, coal, sulphur and potash.
- A dust suppression program on unpaved provincial roads should be undertaken.
- Educational institutions should develop training programs to produce technical and professional people needed to meet the "growing shortage of qualified personnel for air pollution research."
- The government should ask the solvent sales industry for estimates of the type and quantity of solvents used because evaporation of such substances from dry cleaning "metal degreasing" and paint may account for one-fifth of total organic pollutants including those from automobiles.
- B.C. should consider close co-operation with Washington State "because of the similarities in basic industries, geography and meteorology" as to the affect of air pollution.
- More federal-provincial effort is needed to apply weather data to air pollution problems.

"The effects of air pollution are difficult to determine because of the lack fo firm data. . . .

"These effects must be placed in perspective because society must impose certain value judgments or priorities on where tax dollars are expended," the report says.

As a result, provincial government departments such as the health department should be asked to increase efforts at data collection and assessment "particularly in the area of human and animal health and vegetation damage."

RESCUE TEAMS FREE 1,000 FROM SNOW

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Rescue teams in helicopters and on foot dug through snow drifts up to five-feet deep during the weekend to free about 1,000 travellers stranded on Interstate 5 between here and Bakersfield.

Weekend transportation was disrupted by the same storm which brought 1.90 inches of rain here, caused power blackouts in some areas and trees blown down by high winds.

Mountains ringing the Los Angeles basin were blanketed with snow which stayed on the ground at elevations as low as 1,000 feet, a phenomenon not observed in this area since 1956.

Hospital Christmas For Little Karyn

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Little Karyn Prestwich will open for Christmas presents Friday in a hospital bed, and she'll eat the traditional turkey dinner with her family in a hospital cafeteria.

Despite the surroundings, Karyn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Prestwich, say it will be the happiest Christmas their family has ever spent.

Their six-year-old daughter apparently is winning a struggle for life which began when she was mistaken for a deer Nov. 6 on a rural highway near her home in North Fork, Idaho.

Blonde, blue-eyed Karyn, who started first grade in September, was waiting for her school bus when she was struck in the stomach by a rifle bullet from a hunter's weapon.

Taken to a Salmon, Idaho, hospital and later transferred to the University of Utah Medical Centre in Salt Lake City, she remained in critical condition for almost a month with badly damaged kidneys.

Doctors said Karyn made an extraordinarily determined fight for life.

GETS MANY GIFTS

"It's taken quite a while for her to bounce back," said her mother, "and it will be at least another month before she can be released.

Karyn has received many gifts, including a doll sent by Roy C. Wells, 52, of Torrance, Calif., who was charged with assault with a deadly weapon in the shooting.

"The man didn't mean to shoot me," Karyn told the doctor who first treated her. "He thought I was a deer."

Wells has pleaded innocent of the assault charge and guilty to a charge of careless use of firearms.

He has contributed $500 to the Karyn Prestwich fund, which has been set up at a Salmon bank for donations to help pay for Karyn's skyrocketing medical expenses. The fund now has $7,000.

Tate Accused Slaps Deputy

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Tate murder trial broke into an uproar today when the three young women defendants began struggling with bailiffs and shouting at the judge that they were not being permitted to conduct their own defence.

Leslie Van Houten slapped a burly sheriff's deputy as he attempted to hold her in her chair on orders of Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older as the defendants were brought into the courtroom for the first time since Dec. 3.

The three young women—Miss Van Houten, Susan Atkins and Patricia Krenwinkel—were finally pulled from the courtroom by bailiffs, screaming at the judge in defiance.

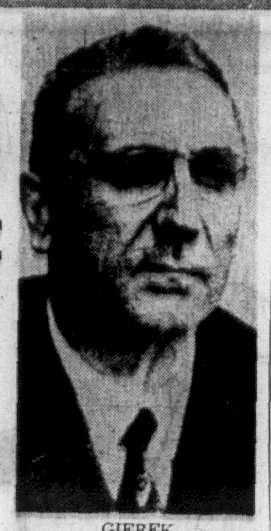
Long Viewed As New Chief



GIEREK

The Washington Post

Edward Gierek, 57, the successor to Wladyslaw Gomulka, was viewed for so long as the coming man of Polish politics that it began to seem as if time was going to pass him by.

Gierek has a reputation as a liberal and as a pragmatic, effective managerial type plus a cast-iron regional position akin to that of an old-fashioned American political boss.

He was the darling of many westerners close to the Polish scene, yet he was largely unknown to the general public in the west. His selection as Gomulka's successor came as a surprise, however, not only because of the dramatic circumstances, but also because of his foreign connections in nationalistic Poland and because Gomulka had apparently become disenchanted with him.

WIDELY FEARED

Whenever Gierek's name was mentioned in analyses of Poland's political future, the alternative was usually the widely feared, authoritarian, nationalist interior minister, Gen. Mieczyslav Moczar, who has often been accused of exploiting traditional Polish xenophobia, particularly anti-Russian and anti-semetic feelings.

Moczar's power base is the leadership of the mass veterans' organization, Zbowid, which groups both communist and non-communist Poles who fought the Nazis.

Since the Soviet army imposed communism on Poland, Gierek is the first top Polish leader who spent the war neither in the Soviet Union nor in the Polish underground.

Gierek's family emigrated to join the large colony of Polish coal miners in the fields of northern France in 1923, when he was only 10 years old. They came from a region which was part of Czarist Russia before Poland regained its independence after the First World War.

WENT TO MINES

Gierek went into the mines at 13. His father died in a mine accident. Gierek joined the French communist party in 1931 and was deported to Poland in 1934 for his role in organizing a sitdown strike.

More than 30 years later, in 1967, French President Charles de Gaulle made a special sidetrip during a state visit to Poland to Gierek's seat of power, Katowice, the capital of the Silesian coal-mining region. It seemed to those who accompanied De Gaulle at the time that he was going out of his way to place France's seal of approval on the deportee.

After his deportation, Gierek served in the Polish army, but got out in time to emigrate again to the west in 1939 before the war's outbreak.

He went to Belgium, and became active as a communist in the Belgian coal mines. His official biography credits him with organizing Polish emigre coalminers in the Belgian resistance to the Nazi occupation. At the end of the war, in 1945, he became head of the Polish section of the Belgian communist party.

RETURNED IN 1948

He finally returned to Poland in 1948 and got a job with the central committee of the Polish party. Soon after, he transferred to Katwocie and started his climb up the hierarchy, studying along the way for an engineering degree from the University of Cracow.

During the De Gaulle visit one of the most striking features of the long ride through coal-dust blackened Silesia was the teutonic, un-Polish self-discipline of Gierek's wards. The region had once been mixed-ethnic.

Poles ironically refer to Gierek's Silesian power base as "the Polish Katanta."

Largely thanks to Gierek's organizational ability, the coal mines, providing Poland's high-quality anthracite coal, are among the few things that work unfailingly in the country. Coal is Poland's leading foreign exchange earner, and Gierek has been able to get his miners higher rations and better pay than any comparable group in Poland.

FALL FROM POWER NO SURPRISE

THE WASHINGTON POST

Wladyslaw Gomulka's fall from power in Warsaw came as less of a surprise to his fellow Poles than to Westerners who remembered him for his brief liberal period in 1956 when he stood up to the Soviet Union.

Then he faced down an infuriated Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, whose answer to Gomulka's demand for an end to total Soviet control of Poland was to surround Warsaw with Soviet armor.

But as the years passed, Gomulka proved that his "Polish road to socialism" was no threat to Soviet predominance. His loyalty was rewarded with the place of honor—next to Soviet party boss Leonid I. Brezhnev—at state occasions in Moscow in recent years.

An archetypal eastern European communist of the pre-Second World War school, Gomulka basically never wavered in his dedication to Moscow.

Poles who in 1956 looked on him as a nationalist hero ready to free Poland from communism—or at least from Moscow's dictates—soured gradually, but sour they did.

Ruthless, dull, ascetic, Gomulka was as untypically Polish in his own way as de Gaulle was untypical of the French. More at home over a beer at his modest house watching television than partaking in the more traditional Polish pastimes of women and vodka, Gomulka represented that fast-disappearing race—the clandestine communist typical of the hunted years before communism came to eastern Europe.

He never mastered the problems of the industrialized and materially demanding nation, which Poland had become at tremendous cost under communist rule.

Unpretentious, steely-eyed, bald and dull, Gomulka was a past master at playing off ascendant liberals against discredited Stalinists, then using moderates to oust the liberals, then nationalists to counterbalance the moderates.

Over the years his name ceased to be a symbol of hope for Poland or other Soviet satellites to the point that a Czech intellectual early in 1968 said privately he prayed that the then emerging Prague freedom bid could avoid "Gomulkaization."

Anti-U.S. Fury On Okinawa May Hurt Pact

By SELIG S. HARRISON
The Washington Post

TOKYO — The anti-American mob fury that burst out at Kadena Air Force Base in Okinawa Sunday came as the climax to a month of growing tension between island residents and U.S. military commanders.

The GI who allegedly ran over an Okinawan with his car and left the victim lying in the street offered the crowning symbol to the people of the pleasure city of Koza, of what they view as an arrogant "occupation" mentality. (See also Page 7.)

More than 1,000 persons stormed into the air base, set fire to 83 cars and battled with U.S. troops in one of the most serious outbreaks of violence since the U.S. captured the island in the closing days of the Second World War.

What made the incident particularly explosive was the simmering resentment in Okinawa over a similar case earlier this month in which an Okinawan woman died and the U.S. serviceman involved got off lightly at the hands of a military court after the U.S. refused to turn him over to Okinawan authorities. Japanese Foreign Minister Kkiichi Aichi told angry Diet members that Japan "could not understand or accept" the light sentence.

GAS NOT REMOVED

Another focus of tension on Okinawa has been the continuing delay in the promised removal of U.S. nerve gas stored on the island. An announcement last week that a scheduled removal in January would cover only part of the gas stored on the island touched off widespread protests.

Okinawans and Japanese generally were outraged that the U.S. military policeman who showed up at the scene of the accident Sunday allegedly paid no attention to the victim before rushing off in pursuit of the hit-and-run driver.

The case almost completely blanketed prime television news time in Japan Sunday night as excited commentators broadcasting from the scene interviewed the Okinawan "man in the street" and bitterly condemned a statement on the accident attributed to the U.S. high commissioner in the Ryukyu Islands, Gen. James Lampert.

According to the Japanese TV networks, Lampert offered no apology for the accident, declaring only that he "wondered whether disturbances to the peace such as we have witnessed this morning help to solve any of our problems."

Japanese radio and TV accounts said that an estimated 800 U.S. troops confronted an Okinawa crowd that grey to 5,000 in the predawn hours.

After initially firing tear-gas shells, these accounts stated, the U.S. troops fired rifle shots into the air to frighten the crowd and eventually fired at the rioters, injuring 14 Okinawan civilians. Twenty nine American soldiers and five Okinawan policemen who helped the U.S. forces were also reported injured.

Observers here speculated that the incident could have a significant impact on negotiations now under way between Japan and the U.S. looking to the return of Okinawa and the other Ryukyuan Islands.

President Nixon has pledged the return of the Ryukyus by 1972 in a meeting with Prime Minister Sato, but this was conditional on detailed negotiations and approval by the legislatures of the two countries.

No Danger To Passengers

MONTREAL (CP)—Passengers aboard an Air France 747 which landed here Sunday with a cracked windscreen panel were never in any danger, a spokesman for the airline said.

"There are two or three layers of glass and plastic in a 747 windscreen and only one of the panels cracked," assistant local manager Blaise Russaouen said.

He added that there was no need to reduce speed or altitude but safety regulations dictate no planes should take off in that condition.

The Paris-Montreal-Chicago flight was halted here and passengers were put aboard other scheduled planes for Chicago.

Ashore Without a Compass

IT CAN HARDLY BE ARGUED that the city council for the coming year has been given any clear indication from the public as to what the people want it to do in regard to major problems. Neither the size of the voting turn-out nor the result of the abortive referendum gives the council any guidelines for the problems that will face it.

Unfortunately, the same lack of direction apparently prevails among the council members. Neither members continuing in office nor those elected, with the exception of Alderman Pollen, have really clarified their stands on the Wharf Street program. And the Wharf Street program looms as the most critical decision which the 1971 council will have to make.

Although the council supported the Wharf Street re-development plan for the Causeway-to-Johnson Street area—a vital concept for the future of the city centre—its members soon broke down when it came to decisions on details. And the first important detail to face them was the Reid proposal for a multi-million-dollar hotel and apartment complex on the waterfront near Bastion Square. That idea, too, was excellent, until a few citizens—Mr. Pollen the only council member among them—began to question the effect on the city's general environment of three high-rise structures on the harbor front.

As a "wall" obscuring the western outlook of the city, as a cause of traffic congestion of unknown extent in an already crowded quarter, as an architectural component of questionable harmony with the existing Empress-Legislative Building scene, the Reid high-rise complex as presented suggested numerous problems. Under the questioning of one member, the council withdrew its earlier unanimous support, eventually waffled into the referendum, and now finds the whole situation up in the air, having only Mayor Haddock's assurance that something, somehow, will be devised.

It is clear that something should be devised if the stagnation of the Wharf Street area is to be overcome. But it is equally clear to a growing number of Victorians—even if not to aldermen—that what is devised should not be of a nature that will build-in future problems for the city, or detract in any way from the existing and potential beauty and utility of our natural setting. To throw up a high-rise complex just because it will produce tax revenue, and because other cities throw up high-rise buildings right and left, is no reason for Victoria to commit itself to that particular type of plan.

Nor can we go much longer without facing up to the fundamental need for a master plan which will sketch out the future of the whole Greater Victoria area—its environmental flavor, its traffic flows, its functions, its general form as a community in which people may enjoy the best life possible. Until such an over-all picture is constructed, patch-work creation will not answer the problem of progress, nor will elected representatives without a clear vision of what the people want be able to provide the blueprint.

Freedom of the Seas—From Filth

SOME MONTHS AGO DR. Robert Parker, federal fisheries research board scientist, noted that all pollutants eventually find their way into the sea and that these pollutants could kill life forms that provide the necessities for the survival of mankind. The continuing concern for the viability of marine life was strongly evident in the presentation of a report on ocean pollution to the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization Conference meeting in Rome last week.

The 94-page report, prepared by 40 scientists from 12 nations, brings world attention to bear upon an aspect of biospheric pollution which is shocking in the extreme. The blue ocean and sparkling white surf represent the acme of natural purity to the human race, and to think that the seas which give earth the designation "the blue planet" could become open sewers should bring the urgency of pollution control home to all of us.

The report to the FAO stresses the necessity for a thorough scientific analysis of the extent of pollution and makes it clear that the means exist for identifying those responsible for oceanic contamination. The wide variety of crude oil composition and its resistance to weather changes would make it possible to develop a pollutant "fingerprint" file. The method is routine and could apparently be used with foolproof accuracy.

Oil, however, is not the only pollutant — lead and mercury are equally dangerous to marine life. And it is not clear whether the identification of these pollutants can be made as accurately as in the case of oil. The only solace in the report is that radioactivity is decreasing and should continue to decrease provided there is no more nuclear testing in the atmosphere.

Governments at all levels around the world are establishing offices to protect the environment and it is becoming obvious that some agency should be established to co-ordinate programs and to act as a clearing-house for ecological data. Although the United Nations is the obvious agency to co-ordinate activities there is no reason why individual governments should not be in touch with neighboring governments to start a co-ordinated program of environmental control and preservation.

There is so much to learn and the time is so urgent it would be tragic if the proliferation of ecological agencies should in any way hinder rather than advance the cause. Effective international control agencies should be established without delay.

'French Pastry' Fronts

THE MEN WHO FREQUENTLY pay the bill—and increase the premiums to cover it — when cars collide head-on have joined the chorus against the "French pastry" fronts and bumpers on recent-model automobiles.

Mr. Bert Warrick, a director of the Insurance Bureau of Canada and chairman of the bureau's B.C. division, says that placing too much of the car ahead of the front bumper, where it is vulnerable, results in high repair costs after collisions. Those costs are reflected in higher charges to the man who buys insurance.

This is a recent development in the continuing campaign for safety and durability in cars, instead of fancy styling that is soon out of date. The argument can be made that built-in obsolescence is a necessary element of the economy as far as automobiles are concerned. If cars are not bought and disposed of within a relatively short time, a smaller market exists for new products and the economy suffers.

There is, however, another important element to be considered, the consumers. Not all of them are anxious, or financially able, to speed the trade-in of automobiles. Many want a serviceable, durable vehicle that will last them a reasonable time. They should give the insurance men what support they can against the fragile fronts which increase repair costs and hasten the day of a new purchase.

A Language Bar to Quebec Professions

THE proposed Quebec legislation restricting the entry of immigrants into 19 professional corporations appears strangely at variance with the economic philosophy of the Bourassa Government. Only as a sop to nationalism does Bill 64 make sense. Quebec for many years has been suspicious of immigration and at times even hostile to it. The reason was, simply, that newcomers from abroad in their great majority opted for the language and culture of the English minority.

Western

Much of the blame for this was attributed to the recruiting policies of the federal government although Quebec was slow to make use of the concurrent powers accorded the provinces in this field by the present constitution.

In any case the diagnosis appears to have been wrong. During the 1960's a very large number of Italians came to Canada; people of a Latin speech who might have been expected to opt for the French culture. They have not done so, a fact dramatically underlined by the St. Leonard school crisis. The most probable explanation is that English, although a minority language in Quebec, offers much larger opportunities in the Canadian and North American contexts.

Unlike its predecessors, the Bourassa government is apparently searching for a means of dealing with the problem that will not involve Quebec in another consitutional confrontation with the federal government. But there is very little to be said for the proposed solution.

Job Promise

Mr. Bourassa is gravely concerned about unemployment and presumably also about inflation which makes other problems much more intractable. He campaigned on the promise of 100,000 more jobs. He is anxious to create more opportunities by bringing in outside capital: to this end he has been working hard to overcome the apprehensions and fears which naturally developed as a result of the FLQ crisis. For the same reasons, Quebec in her own interests might be expected to compete vigorously for talent and skills.

In a fashion the legislation recognizes this: professional corporations may no longer refuse applicants on the grounds that they are not Canadian citizens. They are required instead to apply for citizenship "within the minimum legal delays." On the other hand no future newcomer (even apparently from other parts of Canada) will be admitted to the study or practice of a profession unless he has a "working knoweldge" of the French language.

The scope of the bill is fairly impressive since it will apply to physicians, surgeons, nurses, dentists, pharmacists, optometrists, opticians, dispensing opticians, veterinarians, agronomists, engineers, forest engineers, chemists, accountants, dieticians, social workers, psychologists, industrial relations counsellors, guidance counsellors and chartered administrators. Once the principle is accepted, however, it could no doubt be applied to other occupations.

Limiting Entry

But one of the important reasons for the inflation of costs is the fact that important groups, including some professions and unions, are able through the exercise of monopoly power to control and limit entry. For this reason it is very difficult to bring supply into reasonable relationship with demand. It will be noted that the Quebec list includes the groups which make the best showing year by year in the green book of the Department of National Revenue and may therefore be regarded by others as the pace-setters in the inflationary race.

It may be that Quebec, in the view of the provincial government, is adequately served with doctors and dentists. But surely, if there is to be development, there will be a need for engineers, foresters, chemists and others in the affected groups.

The immigrant is free in Canada to choose his own destination. Will he choose Quebec if the requirements for study and practice are less onerous elsewhere? Almost certainly the effect of the measures will be to divert the stream of skills to other provinces. While this may be a satisfying result for those with a national prejudice against immigration, it is bound to harm the economic interests of Quebec. The damage will not even be measurable by the terms of the bill since others, not immediately affected, will note the direction in which Quebec is moving and act accordingly.

Since Mr. Bourassa thinks primarily in economic terms, and with good reason, this must be the last thing he wants. The legislation contradicts his whole policy. How it could be endorsed by the government, especially in the circumstances now prevailing, is a major political mystery.

U.S. Resentment Rising on Auto Pact

THE pall which has hung over U.S.-Canadian economic relations for the past half-year has lifted somewhat with the Canadian decision authorizing large natural gas sales followed by the liberalizing of Canadian access to the U.S. oil market. But the problems remaining are considerable, a fact that has been underscored by recent congressional action related to the Canadian-American automotive free trade agreement.

Traynor

In preparing the controversial trade bill for Senate action, the powerful Senate finance committee added a provision requiring Canada to agree to meet U.S. objections to the working of the agreement by the end of 1972 or face the possibility of U.S. withdrawal. (Congress has not yet finally acted on the bill.)

Payments Balance

The fundamental U.S. concern underlying the agitation about the auto agreement is the deterioration, from the American point of view, of the trade and payments balance between the U.S. and Canada. U.S. officialdom has shown increasing dissatisfaction with this trend — a trend which will actually be exacerbated by the revenues from the increased sales of Canadian gas and oil to the U.S. The depth of U.S. concern was made clear in a September speech delivered in Montreal by Andrew Brimmer, a member of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. Brimmer dealt at length with the steady erosion of the U.S. trade surplus with Canada — a surplus which, for balance of payments purposes, formerly offset flows of U.S. capital to Canada. Mr. Brimmer noted that the U.S. current-account surplus (incorporating the trade balance) fell from the early 1960s average of $1.5 billion a year, to $750 million a year in the 1968-'69 period.

In the early months of 1970, prior to the floating of the Canadian dollar, very large trade gains had been made, and about 4 per cent of this was due to increased exports to the U.S.

Deterioration Eased

The deterioration of the U.S. current balance with Canada had accounted for one-half of the over-all deterioration in the U.S. current balance between 1966 and 1969. This in turn was set in the context of the deterioration of the total U.S. payments balance through the 1960s. (This deterioration has, however, eased of late as the U.S. economy has slowed.)

This, in Mr. Brimmer's presentation, was part of a large picture of U.S. balance-of-payments strains involving Canadian action — including continued heavy borrowing in U.S. money markets without due regard for agreed conditions for free access, notably the curbing of excessive increases in foreign-exchange reserves and the control of movements of U.S. money through Canada to Europe.

There was thus a dual thrust to Mr. Brimmer's remarks: On the one hand, he advocated steps such as the stimulation of borrowing in Canada which would ease capital-related problems, and on the other, he looked to a reconsideration of the trade trend — a trend closely reflecting the trends in automotive trade since the conclusion of the auto agreement.

While automotive trade between the two countries has grown eightfold, the exports generated by the newly-rationalized Canadian industry sharply reduced the gap between U.S. imports from Canada, with a consequent narrowing of the auto trade surplus which the U.S. had enjoyed prior to the conclusion of the agreement.

According to the annual presidential report on the agreement submitted to Congress in November, the surplus was cut by almost $500 million between 1964 and 1969 and there was the prospect of a deficit during 1970. (Trade balance calculations have until lately been shrouded in confusion, but the U.S. figures incorporated in the latest report are in line with the result of recent independent studies.)

To many, these figures point to only one conclusion: Canada has had the best of the auto agreement and has no grounds for qualifying the accord by the maintenance of safeguards against the erosion of Canadian auto production in the integrated U.S.-Canadian market.

The specific objects of dissatisfaction are provisions establishing a Canadian production floor related to Canadian auto sales and specifying that a certain percentage of the labor and material used in production must be Canadian. While Canadian products move duty-free to the United States, U.S. products — in accordance with the safeguard provisions — may only be imported into Canada duty-free by auto manufacturers. Canadian auto prices have consequently stayed higher than U.S. prices, though the differential has narrowed since the agreement was concluded in 1965.

Would Abandon Safeguards

The U.S. government has for some time contended, in negotiations with Canada, that the safeguards have not been necessary since 1968 and that they should be abandoned. The point was pressed by members of the U.S. cabinet during the recent ministerial-level discussions in Ottawa. In his report to Congress on the agreement, President Nixon was critical of the continuation of the safeguards, saying that they were "an unnecessary burden on the automotive industry, and an obstacle to full realization of the agreement objectives."

The report continued: "Retention of these measures as permanent features of the agreement would be contrary to the premise on which the U.S. entered the agreement, namely, that market forces would be allowed to determine the most economic pattern of investment, production and trade."

The communique issued after the Ottawa meeting made only a guarded reference to further discussions "the question of the continuing need for the transitional (safeguard) arrangements and mutually beneficial improvements to the agreement."

Looking Back

From the Times of Dec. 21, 1910:

Evening Chit-Chat by Ruth Cameron: A Russian woman — Dora Melegari by name — has written a book which I should like to see introduced into our public schools. Maybe you have read it. It is called "Makers of Joys and Sorrows."

Some big critic says it is "the pragmatic system applied to ethics." I must admit I don't know just what that means, but I do know it is a mighty stimulating, thought-provoking book that would do everyone good to read.

Letters

Masterpiece

With reference to your editorial in the Times, December 16, headlined "The laborer and his hire": After reading your paper for over 3 years I think this one is a masterpiece. I'm sure the members of parliament will think you worthy of your hire. You mentioned there should be no Scrooge-like approach to the question of members' pay. I agree with you. But how about the Scrooge-like attitude the members of parliament have towards the low income Old Age Pensioner who will receive 42 cents per month increase January, 1971, compared to the $116.50 increase per month recommended to them.

You said if the members of the Commons do a real job for Canada, we could call it a bargain. I thought all members were supposed to do a good job. They spent millions of dollars to get re-elected to serve Canada for the going salaries and reasonable increases.

Incidently I have worked in Canada for 56 years, including a year in France, and over 30 years for a railway company who have paid me the same small pension for over eight years, and now my government sees fit to increase my pension by the amount of 42 cents per month.

You say it is unfair to compare the income of an old pensioner or a welfare recipient with that of a member of parliament. O.K., who would you compare it with? A skilled mechanic, an unskilled laborer, a doctor, lawyer, newspaperman? Just tell your readers who besides the low fixed-income pensioner receives an increase of 42 cents per month for one year.—"Insulted."

Victoria's Choice

The day is fast approaching when the tourists will no longer come to Victoria and those who have been drawn to this town to live will leave. Climate will not keep them here. They also need beautiful surroundings, allied with history and tradition.

Battle Over Nuclear Power Plants Begins in Earnest in the U.S.

By VICTOR COHN

Citizens of five U.S. midwest states are about to pay several million dollars to delay nuclear power, as part of an escalating national battle over nuclear safety.

Environmentalists in Michigan and Minnesota — who believe that the delay is worth every cent — have succeeded in holding up operation of two major new nuclear plants: one at Palisades, Mich., ready to operate since June; one at Monticello, Minn., ready since September to serve Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas.

Environmentalists in several other states are threatening to hold up a number of others. They have begun hiring first-class, experienced lawyers — to utilities' consternation — as well as marshaling panels of scientists to charge "nuclear carelessness."

The cost to patrons of Consumers Power Co. of Michigan and Northern States Power Co. is already certain to be in the many millions. Consumers power calls it "one million dollars a month." Northern States calls it "$1.5 million to $2 million" monthly to buy coal or to buy power elsewhere to meet demands for electricity.

The threat every place to nuclear power and to easing the power crisis is "extremely critical," the board of directors of the Atomic Industrial Forum — representing nuclear industry and electric utilities — said during its four-day annual meeting in Washington last month.

Only 17 nuclear plants are now operating in the United States, but another 115 are being planned, built or completed.

"Guerrilla warfare" in courts and hearing rooms threatens them all, warned Thomas G. Ayres, president of Commonwealth Edison Co. of Illinois. "The present sword hanging over nuclear plants will last another five years," George Trowbridge, a Washington atomic power lawyer, predicted.

The Forum's directors petitioned the atomic energy commission for "immediate" regulatory changes to speed up local licensing hearings. It is mainly these that opponents have been stretching out for months to delay plant licensing or operation.

Friendly, to say the least, to the Forum's cause, Atomic Energy Commissioner James T. Ramey promised it "early action." He told it of new procedures the commission is considering, paralleling in large part the Forum list.

Early Site Review

He favored substituting "an early and meaningful site review" for present nuclear power plant "construction permit hearings," unless citizens demonstate that they are "substantially adversely affected." He favored eliminating present "operating license hearings," as long as there is early public participation.

The leaders of Congress' joint committee on atomic energy — California's Chet Holifield, Democratic chairman, and Craig Hosmer, ranking Republicans — have likewise promised early attention to eliminating what they call "serious deficiencies" in AEC hearing procedures. They too want to end delays.

What the environmentalists for their part seek are near-zero radiation discharges from atomic plants — discharges far below the levels the AEC, backed by national and international scientific committees, calls acceptable. They also seek near-zero heat discharges into lakes and rivers.

In Minnesota, the state is trying to impose far stricter standards than the AEC's. The power company has taken the state into the courts, and a federal judge is expected to make a decision soon. But the company still must get AEC and state permits.

To the AEC and its friends, including the joint committee, the environmentalists' complaints are wholly unfounded. They feel atomic plants are cleaner than coal or oil-burning plants, and the amounts of radiation released are only a small addition ot the natural radiation of the earth.

Load Up on Fuel

According to Nucleonics Week, the AEC soon intends to allow new nuclear plants to load up with nuclear fuel as part of the construction permit, without waiting for the final operating license.

This would speed up operation once the final permits were granted — and would also make it harder for foes to prevent operation, once a plant was ready to go.

At the Atomic Forum meeting, Rep. Holifield flayed the "self-anointed critics" and "single interest environmentalists."

'Waste of Time'

While he spoke at the Shoreham Hotel, two of the most intense of these critics — AEC scientists Drs. John Gofman and Arthur Tamplin — spoke only miles away, at John F. Kennedy High School in Silver Spring, MD., to the Environmental and Ecological Forum. They work for the Livermore Laboratory of the University of California, under AEC contract.

Even present AEC license hearings, they charged, are "a charade, a waste of time" — "a kangaroo court" by an atomic safety and licensing board "of AEC friends."

Now, they reported, they are urging environmentalists to seek local referendums instead, "barring nuclear plants for 10 years," say, while better plants and a sane — one reducing uses of electricity — national energy policy are developed. Only in 1969, Gofman pointed out, Eugene, Ore., voters approved a $250 million bond issue for a nuclear plant, then reversed themselves this year to order a four-year delay.

There is talk at least of such referendums now in some parts of California and Pennsylvania. But there are demands too in many states, including California, for nuclear instead of "dirty" coal plants.

Coal plants don't have to be dirty, Gofman maintained — "$200 million or $300 million a year in research could give us clean power from coal."

All authorities agree that in the future the country will need all the energy it can get —coal, oil and atomic.

Dr. Ralph Lapp, physicist turned scientific writer and consultant, tried to give the Atomic Forum what he called "a balanced view."

'Far More Harm'

He saw "far more harm to the public" in "today's excess medical and dental X-radiation" than in nuclear power plant radiation. But he said he fears atomic power plant accidents, and favors a limit on future size.

He thinks the new environmental protection agency should make future "reviews of reactor safety," with a public report, not because reactors have been bad, "but because there is a lack of public confidence now in the AEC and utility companies."

He thinks industry could and would accept tighter, near-zero radiation rules, "and I think we'll have to come to these near-zero effluents for psychological reasons."

Compromise

Retiring Atomic Forum president Sherman R. Knapp — retired board chairman of Northeast Utilities — likewise seemed to see room for compromise. He chided nuclear foes but also chided the "pro-nuclear" faction for over-defensiveness.

It is time, he said, for both sides to meet across the table and move "from debate to discussion."

But debate or discussion may not end quickly. Under a department of health, educa*tion and welfare contract, the* National Academy of Sciences early this year appointed a committee of radiation scientists and biologists to re-examine the effects of even tiny increases in radiation on living beings. The study was to take two years.

Representing a major fuel user — General Motors — GM director of plant engineering Howard Baldwin last month said "the energy crisis cannot be solved in less than five years," and both providing energy and preventing pollution will require "a national fuel policy" to "control" oil, coal, natural gas and the atom and "allocate the proper usage of each."

Waste Water to Grow Shrimp?

By LEROY POPE

Hot water effluent from large power plants, far from being a source of pollution, could be of enormous benefit to mankind, according to one leading anti-pollution expert.

"Already hot water effluent from the big Hinkley Point power station at Bridgewater, England, is being used to grow shrimp to maturity in 18 months," said Dr. J. I. Bregman of Wapora, Inc., Washington, D.C. "In the natural waters of the nearby Bristol Channel, shrimp take three to five years to mature."

★

He said that since Britain imports $12 million worth of shrimp yearly, the possibility of using power plant water effluent to grow shrimp could mean a big saving.

British shrimp normally are cold-water shrimp but shrimp grow fastest in warm water such as the Gulf of Mexico and overfishing has seriously diminished the yield.

Bregman said similar experiments to grow warm-water shrimp, fish and lobsters are being conducted successfully with cooling water effluent from a big power plant at San Diego, Calif. A 50-acre pond is being built and will be stocked with 600,000 shrimp, which are expected to reach maturity in one year.

"It also is believed that power plant effluent water can be used to grow lobsters to a size in two years that would take four to seven years in the sea," he said.

Bregman's company is a subsidiary of Alcolac Chemical Corp. of Baltimore, which is headed by Dr. Vsevolod Blinoff, who advocates taking the longest possible view of the problems of water pollution and water utilization.

★

Hot water effluent also could prove extremely valuable in agriculture, poultry and hog breeding and for heating homes and business premises, Bregman said.

While the cost and technology of distributing the hot water might be difficult, it nevertheless is true, he said, that Consolidated Edison Co.'s nuclear power complex at Indian Point on the Hudson River above New York City can generate enough effluent to heat 800,000 homes. This would be done in the same way water from natural hot springs is used for home heating in several parts of the world.

Some experiments are under way to show that hot water effluent used for irrigation can increase crops substantially. The public water board at Eugene, Ore., is starting such a project on a 170-acre fruitland tract using effluent from a Weyerhaeuser paper mill. The warm water also is expected to protect the fruit trees from frost.

Pacific Power and Electric Co. is conducting a similar experiment but is using electric cables to heat the soil. However, if the experiment is successful, the company said it would recommend use of hot effluent water instead of electric cables to warm the soil.

Leonardo Worked Out His Problems in Art

By PAUL RICHARD

Leonardo is the Hamlet of art history whom each of us must recreate for himself.

—Kenneth Clark

Art historians find it an irresistible temptation. Intrigued by his illegitimacy and genius, his putative homosexuality and the Mona Lisa's smile, they have been analyzing Leonardo da Vinci for the past 400 years.

Giorgio Vasari, in the 16th century, viewed him as a semi-saint; Walter Pater, in the 19th century, dwelt on his romantic madness; and Sigmund Freud, in 1910, wrote a little book about his sexual abnormalities, his mother and dreams.

This old game has now been given a new and startling twist.

It now appears that the first man to psychoanalyze Leonardo was none other than Leonardo himself.

●

Or so believes Dr. Raymond S. Stites, a Washington D.C. scholar long associated with the National Gallery of Art, who has been scrutinizing the works of Leonardo for the past 50 years.

Stites states his case for what he terms "Leonardo's self-psychoanalysis" in "The sublimations of Leonardo da Vinci," a heavily documented 422-page volume published the other day by the Smithsonian Institution Press.

●

Stites heavily relies on the 45 pages of previously untranslated word-lists contained in the "codex trivulzi*anus," a small Leonardo* notebook now in the museum of the Sforza Castle in Milan.

These word-lists, Stites believes, reveal Leonardo "talking to himself," plotting his stream-of-consciousness through free association.

"To covet, to desire, to treasure, separated, separating, fickleness, supreme. . . ."

*Stites belives these word-*lists served a therapeutic function, and that Leonardo — who had his share of problems — worked these problems out by associating freely, not only in his word-lists, but in his science and his art.

"Leonardo's inventions, in art and science, seem to emerge naturally, that is, in a stream-of-consciousness style," writes Stites.

In the growth pattern of these inventions his thoughts slipped easily and without hindrance from one idea or concept to another. He was, in short, very much like a person in a continual state of psychoanalysis."

Leonardo, who wrote backwards in his notebooks, also doodled beautifully. An imperious hawk-nosed profile (which Stites believes portrays the artist's domineering father) appears in Leonardo's notebooks more than 90 times.

Other images — the landscape of Vinci, Leonardo's birthplace, a screaming portrait of the goddess Nemesis, a lion and a dragon — also recur in the works of Leonardo.

●

For Stites, now 70, these images are keys. He as been using them since 1927 to prove — at least to his own satisfaction — that a score of statuettes and paintings often attributed to other artists are actually by Leonardo.

As late as 1927, some scholars still assigned as many as 94 paintings to Leonardo's hand. Stites notes, however, that "owing to the effort of detractors, only between 14 and 18 of these are now generally accepted."

While the "detractors" have been pruning, Stites has beeen moving in the opposite direction.

●

In Vienna in the 1920s Stites *met Freud, underwent psy*choanalysis, and wrote a doctoral thesis, since published as "The Most Sculptures of Leonardo." In that book Stites discusses 10 "long unrecognized" Leonardo sculptures. He has since discovered perhaps a dozen more.

To the layman, Stites' arguments seem wholly plausible, but despite the evidence he musters, not all Leonardo scholars are entirely convinced.

Of the five scholars who read Stites' book in manuscript, one, Stites says, told the Smithsonian that it should not be published. The book is not an official publication of the National Gallery of Art, where Stites worked from 1948 to 1969.

Many scholars, perhaps influenced by Freud and by the fact that Leonardo was twice anonymously accused of sodomy, tend to view the artist as both unhappy and abnor*mal. Stites believes, in con*trast, that Leonardo's self-analysis was essentially successful, and that he made himself a normal, happy and extraordinarily effective man.

Stites has declined his royalties "so that students can afford the book." A handome volume containing 311 illustrations, "The Sub*limations of Leonardo da* Vinci" costs $14.95.

Our Compliments to the Author

By RUSSELL BAKER

Al, Nick, Pete and Quentin went to an expensively decorated restaurant for lunch. The food was just as expensive as the decor and almost as tasty.

"The chef here isn't much," Al confided as they sat down, "but they've got the best menu writer on the east coast. It cost them a fortune to hire him. He'd been in New York writing book-jacket blurbs for gothic novels."

A waiter took their drink orders, distributed four menus and departed.

After studying his menus a few minutes Nick said he was thinking of ordering the tender chunklets of milk fed veal lovingly dipped in the slightest hint of aromatic herb sauce and served in an iron casserole rushed fresh from the famed forges of France.

"That's a little too metallic for my literary taste," Al said. "Personally, I recommend the lumps of luscious backfin crabmeat delicately wrapped in light French crepes to retain the sealed-in flavors and savory juices, baked and covered with sauce mornay in a delightful sprinkling of parmesan cheese redolent with memories of sunny Naples."

★ ★ ★

Pete said he was watching his weight, but found it hard to resist the refulgent green lightness of gelatine quivering on an emerald bed of crisp, crunchy lettuce born of the mating between sparkling sunshine and cool, clear water in the golden valleys of old California.

Quentin said he didn't see anything on the menu that didn't need editing and thought he'd just have a hamburger, medium rare.

"You can't just ask for a hamburger in a place like this," Al whispered.

★ ★ ★

"The author would be insulted," said Nick.

"In France, where food really counts for something," said Pete, "men have been shot for less."

"I want a hamburger!" insisted Quentin, who tended to stubbornness. "Medium rare."

"Quent, old boy," said Al, "why not try the seafood symphony?"

"Because," said Quentin, consulting the menu, "I don't want succulently clustered clumps of crabmeat, jumbo shrimp, tender lobster meat and fresh salt water fish sauteed in butter with mushrooms and shallots, blended with thick luscious cream and flavored with shimmeringly shadowed sherry wine to create a symphony in seafood, served in casserole."

The waiter, who had overheard, came over. He was miffed.

"Our waiters do not traffic in steak," the waiter said. "Steak is for illiterates."

This put Quentin's back up. "I demand to see the author," he said.

Some time later an overpaid man stuffed with succulent, juicy adjectives presented himself. "Hamburger!" he repeated.

"Hamburger," said Quentin. "Medium rare."

The writer wandered to the water cooler, washed his hands, looked up the weather report, made some unnecessary phone calls, looked at his tongue in a mirror for symptoms of fatal disease and, when he had at last exhausted methods of killing time, went to his typewriter.

★ ★ ★

Returning to Quentin, he asked, "is the creation you have in mind a magnificently seared thickness of sizzling goodness that has been reduced by grinders of rarest Toledo steel to mouth-watering palate tantalizers of Kansas City beef beaded with rich ruby globules served on a farm fresh roll and laced lavishly with great oozing lashings of rarest mustards and onions from faraway Spain?"

"Enough! Enough! Stop!" cried Quentin. "I can't listen to another bite."

The menu writer smiled in triumph and left. The waiter returned. "Are you gentlemen ready to order?" he asked.

"Yes," said Al. "Four coffees."

"And," said Nick, "send our compliments to the author."

Quentin burped with contentment.

Canada's 'Quiet' Envoy Dies at 68

OTTAWA (CP) — Arnold Heeney, 68, Canadian diplomat and influential architect of Canada's relations with the United States for 20 years, died Sunday.

Mr. Heeney was ambassador to Washington from 1953 to 1962, when he became chairman of the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission which deals with U.S.-Canadian border problems. He held the latter post with one interruption, until his death.

In those two roles he was a leading practitioner of "quiet diplomacy" whose chief exponent after Mackenzie King was former prime minister Lester Pearson.

Prime Minister Trudeau, in a tribute Sunday, called the Montreal native "Canada's public servant sans pareil."

"Canada has lost one of her most talented citizens—one who in a single lifetime contributed the equivalent of several full careers."

Funeral services for Mr. Heeney, who was to have retired from the IJC Dec. 31 after 32 years in the public service, will be held Wednesday at the Anglican Christ Church Cathedral in Ottawa.

Mr. Heeney presided in Washington at a period in Canada's relations with the United States that included the maturing of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the foundation-laying of NORAD—the North American Air Defence Command.

GAVE VIEWS

His views on Canada's proper relationship with the U.S. were enunciated in a 1965 report commissioned by then prime minister Pearson and President Johnson.

The document cited the unique role of the U.S. as leader of the Western alliance and said:

"It is important and reasonable that Canadian authorities should have careful regard for the U.S. government's position in this world context and, in the absence of special Canadian interests or obligationss, avoid so far as possible public disagreement, especially upon critical issues."

That report was published three months after Prime Minister Pearson raised the ire of President Johnson by urging a pause in U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam.

One of Mr. Heeney's last official acts this fall was the signing of an IJC report on pollution in the lower Great Lakes to be delivered to the U.S. and Canadian governments by the end of the year.

Riding Reaction May Decide MP Pay Issue

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — The question of whether members of Parliament receive a pay increase probably will be settled during the Christmas recess—by their constituents.

As they left Ottawa for a three-week Christmas holiday, MPs were unanimously predicting that constituency reaction to the proposed pay increases would decide whether the Commons will go ahead with recommendations that would provide basic salaries of $25,000.

The recommendations were handed down last week by a three-man committee of outsiders. The committee suggested, among other things, that the present basic salary of $12,000, plus a tax-free annual allowance of $6,000, be replaced with a taxable salary of $25,000.

While this would not provide a significant change in take-home pay, there would be other benefits for members in the form of housing allowances and expenses.

An overwhelming majority of the 264 MPs favor the increases—many have run into severe financial problems in maintaining two homes and meeting the unusual expense that goes with public office.

SHARP CRITICISM

But any hope they might have had that the increases would slip quietly through the Commons was shattered when such formidable political figures as John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) and Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) indicated their outright opposition.

The reaction of Mr. Knowles was "one of horror."

There have been other scattered voices of dissent—all serving to draw attention to an issue which all MPs agree is delicate.

There is little doubt that most MPs need additional money but they acknowledge the difficulty of voting for a hefty raise—even though it's more apparent than real—at a time when the country is under a heavy siege of unemployment.

The problem is more acute for rural MPs, whose constituents would dearly like to live on the salaries their members now get.

"The Christmas recess should tell the story," said one MP. "If we all come back here with a very bad reaction from our constituents, we can forget the whole thing for a while."

Another MP said he was prepared to argue the case with his constituents even though it was a low-salaried area.

"Perhaps it's time I showed some of these letters," he said, pointing to one from an organization in his riding that said it "would expect" a $500 donation from the MP.

"I am fed up with being overdrawn at two banks."

The Christmas recess, while giving constituents an opportunity to express their views on the matter, will also allow some internal rancour to cool within the various political parties. Opposition to the increases has brought some bitter private comments from fellow party members.

U.S. CRIME RATE UP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crime in the United States increased 10 per cent during the first nine months of this year compared with the same period in 1969, the FBI said today.

Robbery increased 15 per cent, murder nine per cent, aggravated assault seven per cent and forcible rape two per cent, the FBI said.

Armed robbery, which accounts for two-thirds of all robbery offences, increased 18 per cent during the nine-month period, the FBI said, and aggravated assaults with firearms increased 10 per cent.

Among property crimes, larceny of $150 or more rose 15 per cent, burglary nine per cent and auto theft six per cent, the report said.

Suburban areas recorded the largest crime increase — 14 per cent, the report said, while cirmes rose nine per cent in rural areas and six per cent in cities of more than 250,000 population.

JAPAN SEEKING N.S. PORT?

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia interests will carry out negotiations with representatives of the Japanese steel industry when they visit Canada in January in search of a port for shipping coking coal bound for Japan, it was disclosed here on the weekend.

Finley MacDonald, president of Industrial Estates Ltd., Nova Scotia's industry-seeking Crown corporation, said the initial discussions with the Japanese will be through agencies "other than IEL."

He did not identify the agencies concerned.

The Chronicle-Herald says provincial interests "have or soon will be" visiting Virginia to discuss the matter with the Norfolk and Western Railway of Roanoke, Va.

The newspaper says the railway and a Japanese steel firm, Nippon Steel Corp., are interested in establishing a superport in the Maritimes to be used initially for shipping coking coal to Japan.

James Addison, president of the New Brunswick Development Corp., said last week that a deal will be signed with the parties concerned for setting up a port at Lorneville, N.B.

John L. Grice, executive secretary of the Halifax-Dartmouth port commission, called the announcement "irresponsible and premature." He said the parties concerned had made no commitment.

Canada Has Record Trade Surplus

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada had a record surplus of $468 million in its balance of international payments during the third quarter of 1970, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

It brought the surplus for the first nine months of the year to $755 million, recording a dramatic switch from a deficit of $601 million for the same period in 1969.

Booming Canadian exports, mainly to Europe, Japan and other countries which have not been historically strong buyers of Canadian goods, were responsible for a big boost in Canadian receipts from abroad. The government, however, does not expect the same phenomenal growth to continue next year, and latest economic reports indicate a slowdown in most European countries.

Added to the export boom, there was a normal swing during the third quarter of the year —July, August and September —towards an inflow of tourist and travel expenditures.

Exports in the first nine months of 1970 reached a record $12,509 million, up 16 per cent from a year earlier. Imports rose by only two per cent, to $10,482 million. This produced a commodity trade surplus of $2,027 million, more than three times the nine-month surplus last year.

NON-TRADE RECEIPTS UP

In services and other non-merchandise trade, receipts rose to $3,529 million—up 14 per cent from a year ago—while payments rose to $4,801 million, up 12 per cent. The resulting deficit of $1,272 million was an increase of $85 million or seven per cent from the deficit in the first nine months of last year.

There was a net inflow of foreign capital amounting to $153 million in the third quarter, bringing the total for nine months to $797 million. This compares with an inflow of $1,688 million in the same period last year.

DBS said third-quarter long-term capital movements showed sharply reduced payments abroad for the retirement of Canadian securities, and more foreign sales of new securities.

There was a dramatic swing in the flow of short-term capital, from a surplus of $546 million in the second quarter of 1970 to a deficit of $395 million in the third. This was mainly due to an increase of $440 million in Canadian holdings of foreign currency bank balances and other short-term funds abroad.

Canada acquired $226 million in official reserves in the third quarter, down sharply from $1,308 in the first half of the year. The floating of the Canadian dollar in international exchange markets on June 1 meant the government no longer had to buy foreign exchange to keep the dollar pegged at 92.5 cents in U.S. funds.

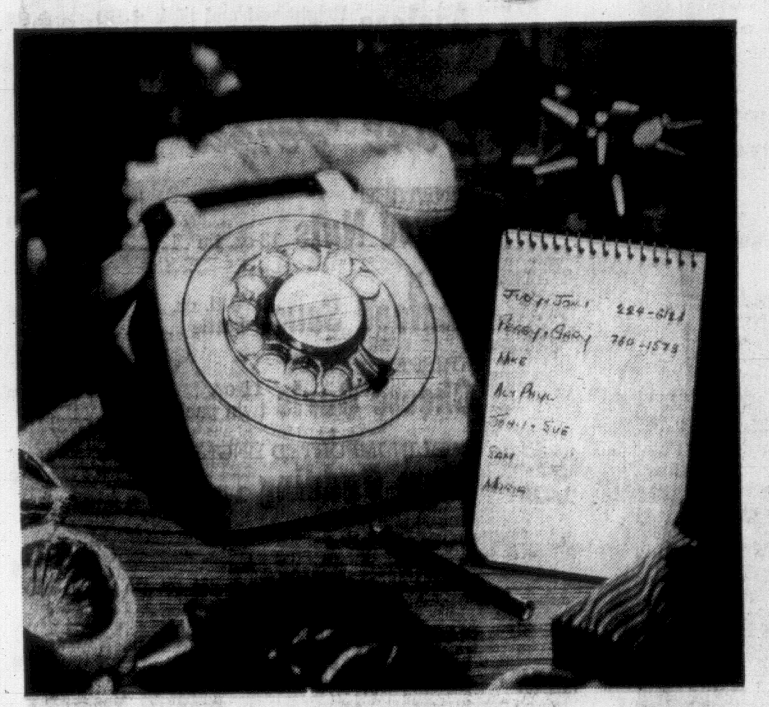
Christmas long distance calling



There is great joy in exchanging Christmas greetings by telephone. So much so, in fact, that thousands and thousands of Canadians do so each year.

It isn't possible to reserve specific times for long distance calls but you can minimize delay by following these tips.

FIRST — Make a list now of the phone numbers (including area codes) of the people you plan to call. Get these, without charge, through your operator or by following instructions in your telephone directory for dialing direct. Do this now and avoid battling heavy holiday traffic just to get your numbers.

SECOND — Don't wait until Christmas Day itself, when circuits across Canada will be overloaded, to place all your calls. Spread them over the holiday season. Your family and friends will enjoy your calls just as much and you'll be more certain of getting through without delay.

REMEMBER — Most long distance rates are lower after 6 p.m. daily and all day Sunday. Check your directory for full details.

Have your Christmas numbers ready, spread your calls, and have a happy Christmas.

POTATOES Excellent White Cookers, No. 2, 20-lb. cello bag 69c

GETTING IT ON together, the Newcombe Glee Club prepares for its fourth annual series of early morning public concerts in the rotunda of the main Legislative Building. Choir, composed of provincial civil servants, made 1970 debut Friday morning, but concerts will continue through Wednesday from 8 to 8:30 a.m. Thursday morning the times will change slightly—8:15 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. There will also be a public performance in the Broad Street mall Wednesday from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Christmas Just Another Day For Victoria-Area Policemen

There'll be no peace for the keepers of the peace come Christmas as regular shifts will be on duty at Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt police stations.

The firemen, too, will be working regular hours at Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay.

Some 65 bus drivers will make it possible for people without cars to get their Christmas visiting done Dec. 25 and Boxing Day, as B.C. Hydro runs its regular holiday service.

There will also be a special service available Boxing Day and the following Sunday when B.C. Hydro will provide bus tours of the best Christmas lighting and decorations in the city.

Buses will leave the Hydro building at 820 Pandora at 7 p.m. both Dec. 26 and 27.

The telephone operators are another faceless group that will be working hard to make Christmas cheerier for everyone.

166 OPERATORS

B.C. Telephone will have 166 operators working Victoria exchanges Christmas Day and they'll be expected to quickly and efficiently place a predicted 12,650 person-to-person long distance calls.

Telephone company officials also expect another 27,000 calls will be placed via direct distance dialing.

While Victoria's telephone operators will be handling a total volume of 39,650 calls, the rest of the province's telephone network will be struggling with an expected total of 418,570 long distance calls.

Most postal employees will be on holiday Christmas Day and New Year's Day, but special deliveries will be received and delivered between the normal holiday hours of 8 a.m. and 8 p.m.

LOBBY CLOSED

The lock box lobby will remain closed from midnight Christmas Eve to 5 a.m. Boxing Day and between the same hours New Year's Eve and Jan. 2.

Normal holiday service for special deliveries, mail receipts and despatches and street letter box collections will be available Boxing Day.

There will be no local letter delivery Monday, Dec. 28, but rural mail will be delivered as usual. Wicket services will be available from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The lock box lobby will be open and normal holiday service will be in effect for special deliveries, mail receipts and despatches and street letter box collections.

All mail service including letter carrier delivery is cancelled for Christmas Day and New Year's Day.

The main public library will be closed to the public Dec. 28, 29, 30 and 31 to allow alterations and repair work to be carried out and new tubes installed in the boiler.

It was also decided to close the library at 5 p.m. on Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve.

On Jan. 2, normal Saturday service will prevail. There will be regular mail delivery Monday, Jan. 4.

Newspaper service will be partially restricted over the Christmas weekend. The Times will not publish Christmas Day, but there will be a regular paper Boxing Day. The Colonist will not publish Boxing Day.

All major department stores will be closed over the Christmas weekend, and people will have to rely on neighborhood grocery stores for any items they forgot to pick up before Christmas.

As a service to its readers the Times publishes the following list of stores that will be open in strategic areas of Greater Victoria, Christmas and Boxing Day.

Underground Study Starts

B. C. Hydro and the Union of B.C. Municipalities are studying the possibilities of underground power transmission lines, Victoria city hall was informed today.

A letter from the Capital Regional District says a B.C. Hydro-UBCM technical committee was created recently to look into the advantages and disadvantages of underground versus overhead transmission wiring.

"It is expected that the resulting findings will provide clarification on this serious environmental problem," the letter says.

Council asked the regional district last May and again last month what progress is being made to find alternatives to overhead wiring, following controversy over planned transmission lines throughout the district.

"Look at the great shape the new Corollas are in."

We've changed our famous line of Toyota Corollas. They're bigger inside, a little longer and wider outside and a lot prettier all over. In fact we've changed everything except the high level of quality that's a part of every Toyota we build.

The Corollas are available in three models. A sleek low slung Coupe, a two door sedan for the economy minded, and a roomy wagon for sport minded families. The engine is the rugged, well tried 73 horsepower overhead valve four coupled to a four speed all synchromesh transmission or an optional automatic (coupe and 2 door only). We've also added front disc brakes for even safer, more controlled stops and of course, all the safety and luxury equipment at no extra cost. Fully reclining bucket seats, rear window defogger,* collapsible steering column, heavy duty heater, upper level "Fresh-flow" ventilation with fan boost, just to mention a few. Add Toyota's world-wide reputation for craftsmanship, a service organization second to none and owning a Corolla makes a lot of beautiful sense. The Toyota Corolla Coupe, two door sedan and wagon. See them at your Toyota dealer (there are over 1000 in North America). Put yourself in great shape for just $1965. (2 door sedan).

*Coupe and sedan models.

There were no changes in the shareholdings of the Corporation's six major investments during the year. These are 500,000 shares B.C. Forest Products Ltd., 2 million shares Dominion Stores Ltd., 2.5 million shares Domtar Ltd., 1 million shares Hollinger Mines Ltd., 2.85 million shares Massey-Ferguson Ltd. and 2.68 million shares Standard Broadcasting Corp.

Market value of holdings was $159 million (cost $102.5 million) at Nov. 30, compared with $196.8 million a year ago.

Harding Carpets

Harding Carpets Ltd. sales rose and net profit fell in the year ended Oct. 31, partly through an improved marketing organization in the first instance but affected by a seven-week strike and an economic slowdown.

Sales were 11.9 per cent higher at $30 million compared with $26.8 million last year. In the fourth quarter sales were up 4.8 per cent to $7.5 million.

Net profit declined to $1 million (66 cents a share) from $1.47 million (93 cents after extraordinary item).

Western Hotels

Western International Hotels Co. chairman Edward E. Carlson has replaced George E. Keck as president and chief executive officer of UAL Inc., the holding company of United Air Lines following a nine-month loss of $16.1 million.

In the same period a year ago the line made a profit of nearly $50 million.

Keck, 58, will remain on the UAL board of directors.

UAL acquired Western International, and its string of 60 hotels in 14 countries, four months ago.

Vancouver Prices On Rise

OTTAWA (CP)—Consumer prices declined last month in St. John's, Nfld., Winnipeg, Saskatoon and Regina, but rose in seven other principal cities, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The city indexes rose in Halifax, Saint John, N.B., Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Edmonton, Calgary and Vancouver.

DBS said movements were mixed in food, housing and clothing. While food prices fell 1.4 per cent in Winnipeg, they rose 1.3 per cent in Vancouver.

The indexes, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, measure the change in consumer prices in each city independently, and cannot be used to compare living costs between one city and another.

The consumer price index for the country as a whole remained unchanged in November at 130.3. Indexes for the principal cities in November, with October indexes for comparison, were:

St. John's 121.0, down from 121.2; Halifax 124.8, up from 124.3; Saint John 123.9, up from 123.4; Montreal 124.1, up from 123.6; Ottawa 127.6, up from 127.5; Toronto 127.3, up from 127.1; Winnipeg 126.9, down from 127.1; Saskatoon and Regina 121.8, down from 122.1; Edmonton and Calgary 126.1, up from 125.7; Vancouver 123.9, up from 123.3.

AFTER NEAR-COLLAPSE IN 1969, 1970

Changes Needed on Wall Street

By PHILIP GREER

NEW YORK (WP) — The only certainty in Wall Street's future is that there will be changes. Changes that will remake the operations and rules and shatter the traditions.

Changes in the power of the securities industry, changes in the way brokers finance their business, in the way they run their firms, in their own use of the markets. Changes in the mechanism and structure of the exchanges and in the industry's historic self-regulatory role.

The need for change — and the street's grudging willingness to accept it — are, up to now, virtually the only tangible result of the near-collapse of the markets in 1969 and 1970.

Most of the changes will not be noticeable to the investing public. Brokers will take orders in the same way — although there may be fewer brokers to deal with — and, except possibly for speedier service, there will be little surface effect on the public.

The changes in the industry will be something else. They undoubtedly will shake its foundations, for it is in the industry's structure that the real roots of the problems lie.

Since its founding in 1792, the New York Stock Exchange has been a private club, restricted since 1929 to a membership of 1366. Until the 1950s, it was based on a myriad of partnerships whose main goal was making money for themselves and excluding outsiders from their affairs.

●

For most of its 178-year existence, the NYSE was able to defend this system. In fact, it was able to convince the government, in the wake of the crash-related scandals of the early 1930s, that the exchange should be the prime regulator of its members, backed only by "oversight" by a Securities Exchange Commission.

Through the years, there were strains on the structure. Even after the crash, Wall Street did not lose as many member firms as the 110 that disappeared in 1969 and 1970.

The pressures that developed in 1969 were vastly different. For the first time, Wall Street came face to face with the possible failure of large, publicly-oriented firms.

For two years, the brokers were haunted by the fear that, if a large house were forced to close its doors, investor confidence in all the brokers could be destroyed, touching off a run — withdrawal of cash and securities and distrust of the stock market — that would take years, if not decades, to repair.

In the 60s, the inertia of the past began to catch up with the industry. The initial blow came in 1967, although some say the first signs were apparent even earlier, when average daily volume on the big board zoomed over 10 million shares a day, just one year after the exchange predicted that level would not be reached until 1975. In 1968, volume climbed to a record 2.9 billion shares, or nearly 13 million a day.

●

Never an industry to embrace the costs of modernization, the street was caught with pencils and eyeshades down. Historically sales-oriented, little attention had ever been paid to the "back office" paper-work function. A study made for the exchange has shown that completion of each transaction, no matter what the size, involved at least 30 hand processes. (With the inevitable errors, the total can climb above 60.)

To accommodate the rush of business as stock prices boomed, the brokers opened more and more offices across the country. In 1967, exchange members added 438 offices, a 12 per cent increase. In 1968, another 148 offices were opened.

The number of registered representatives, or salesmen, climbed from 38,514 in 1967 to 52,446 at the end of 1969.

The increase in the number of salesmen and their offices poured business into understaffed and antiquated brokerage headquarters. As far back as the SEC's special study of securities markets in 1963, the industry had been warned that it had to modernize and computerize. But the advice was ignored. Mammoth branch office networks were built, backet up by processing systems that depended on clerks with pencil and paper rather than automated machinery.

As volume climbed to record levels and held there, the back offices were swamped in paperwork and the street was headed down an inexorable road to upheaval.

First, brokers swamped by paperwork were unable to deliver securities within the required four-day period (since lengthened to five). When securities were not delivered, the selling broker could not collect the sales price, although he was often obligated to make payment to his customers. In April, 1968, when the NYSE made its first tabulation of these "fails," it found an undelivered backlog of $2.67 billion. With the tie-up in deliveries, the payment of dividends was equally snafued, heaping more costs on the brokers.

To cope with the avalanche of paper, the exchange in June, 1968, ordered trading halted one day a week and maintained that schedule until the end of the year. Brokers began a frantic search for help, hiring almost any applicant. Bounties were offered to employees who brought in new recruits.

The record trading pace, which was maintained well into 1969, drove home to the brokers the need to modernize their back offices and "crash" computer installations were ordered.

Under such conditions, mistakes were inevitable. Ill-fated Goodbody and Co. developed an "autocage," computerizing the cashier's department which handled securities and cash. But the firm made no adjustments to handle the inflow and output of the autocage. Although industry sources familiar with the system laud it, the development turned into a $5 million fiasco for the firm.

The losses exposed still another flaw in the structure. Among those who contribute capital to brokerage firms are so-called "subordinated lenders," often good customers who allow the firm to include their holdings in its capital and receive a return similar to bank interest. Often these loans could be withdrawn on as little as 90 days notice.

The losses by the brokers — and the rise in interest rates which offered better returns on other investments — prompted many subordinated lenders to withdraw their capital at the time when the brokers needed it most.

The withdrawals left brokers overextended and some of them in violation of NYSE rules, which require a broker to have $1 in capital for every $20 in liabilities. It also made the brokers and the industry think more about the shaky nature of the capital base of the industry.

GM Hikes Averaging $17 Higher

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. announced today that prices of its 1971 cars will average about $17 higher than tentatively announced last Sept. 25.

At that time, the company said the prices were subject to change and would be revised at the conclusion of a strike at its seven plants.

The strike by 23,500 United Auto Workers ended last Thursday.

The company said prices on some 1971 models, such as the new Chevrolet Vega, remain unchanged. On some Chevrolet station wagons, prices have been decreased $17 from the Sept. 25 price list.

The company said the price increases will not be applied to "firm retail orders written by dealers based on the tentative list prices."

In cases where the new prices are lower, refunds will be made to the dealers.

The prices for trucks will be increased an average of $32 from the tentative prices of Sept. 25.

Interest Acquired By Royal Bank

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Royal Bank of Canada has acquired an interest in the Investment and Merchant Finance Corp. Ltd., an Australian merchant bank, it has been announced.

Royal Bank president W. Earle McLaughlin said the interest was "substantial," comprising 630,000 shares or approximately 25 per cent of outstanding capital and equal to the ownership position held by the National Bank of Detroit since 1969.

IMFC is controlled by more than 1,000 Australian shareholders, he said.

Unregistered Shares Sold Firm Charges

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Principal Savings and Trust of Edmonton, Alta., has accused a Denver brokerage firm of selling $140,248 in unregistered shares in violation of federal law.

In a suit filed in U.S. district court, the Edmonton firm asks that Boettcher and Co. be ordered to refund purchase price of 30,000 Goldfield Corp. shares.

Principal Savings contends Boettcher did not explain the shares were unregistered in selling them last January. Not until later, the suit says, did Principal Savings learn the shares could not be sold.

FIGHTING HAWK POPS PENGUIN

Involved in numerous fights this season, youthful Black Hawk defenceman Keith Magnuson appears to have developed considerable punching skill as he pops Keith McCreary of Pittsburgh Penguins with straight right during this bit of action in National Hockey League game Sunday night in Chicago. At other times, Hawks had considerable trouble with Penguins and needed two third-period tallies to snatch 2-1 victory, with Magnuson earning assist on winning goal, scored by Bobby Hull.

Bengals Arrive Early; Chiefs, Rams Miss Out

Cowboys, '49ers Slip In; Patriots 'First' In Draft

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati Bengals threw perfectionist Paul Brown's playoff timetable off by two years but the Dallas Cowboys' five-week plan was right on schedule.

As a result, both of those teams—along with San Francisco '49ers, Detroit Lions and Miami Dolphins—advanced to the National Football League playoffs with impressive victories Sunday, joining Minnesota Vikings, Baltimore Colts and Oakland Raiders, who made it earlier.

Among the disappointed were the Super Bowl champion Kansas City Chiefs, Los Angeles Rams, New York Giants, Cleveland Browns and St. Louis Cardinals. Even winning didn't help the Rams and Browns, while the other three pretenders all lost.

The road to the Jan. 17 Super Bowl in Miami begins next Saturday with Cincinnati at Baltimore and Detroit at Dallas. On Sunday, it's San Francisco at Minnesota and Miami at Oakland, with the winners meeting for the National and American Conference titles Jan. 3.

The Bengals clinched their playoff berth with a 45-7 rout of Boston Patriots that gave them the AFC Central Division championship, at the same time ensuring that the Patriots would get first pick in next month's college draft thanks to their 2-12 record, the worst in pro football.

DANCING '49ERS

Holding game ball aloft in victory signal, San Francisco's Forrest Blue leads '49ers off field after team clinched divisional crown Sunday with 38-7 National Football League victory over Oakland Raiders. (AP Wirephoto.)

'A Dream Come True' Says Brown

Brown, who beat out the Cleveland team he once coached by one game, called it a "personal dream come true."

Running back Essex Johnson said when the expanion Bengals were born in 1968, Brown told the players it would take five years to mould a winning team.

The Bengals scored the first seven times they had the ball Sunday. Virgil Carter passed for one touchdown before an injury forced him to give way to Sam Wyche, who threw for two more and scored one himself. It was Cincinnati's seventh consecutive victory following a six-game losing streak.

Dallas smashed Houston 52-10 and captured the NFC East title as the Giants bowed to Los Angeles 31-3. Craig Morton of the Cowboys passed for 349 yards and five touchdowns, with Bob Hayes grabbing four of them.

Five wins in a row enabled the Cowboys to finish at 10-4.

"Five weeks really make a difference," said coach Tom Landry. "It's hard to turn a season around that well. But we did it and I think we played the best we have in two years."

John Brodie's three scoring passes paced the '49ers to the first championship in their 25-year history with a 38-7 romp over Oakland.

Roman Gabriel threw to Pat Studstill for the first two Los Angeles scores against the Giants.

Barney's Long Runs Spark Lions

Detroit and Miami wound up with 10-4 records and made the playoffs with the best second-place records in their respective conferences.

The Lions blanked Green Bay 20-0 behind return specialist Lem Barney, who ran 49 yards to score with an interception, raced 65 yards with a punt to set up another touchdown and put the ball in field goal position with a 74-yard kickoff return.

The Dolphins blasted Buffalo 45-7 for their sixth straight win and the highest point total and most one-sided victory in their five-year existence. Jim Kiick barrelled into the end zone three times and Larry Csonka set up two scores with a 54-yard run and a 54-yard pass reception.

Kansas City bowed to San Diego 31-13 as Mike Garrett scored twice, including a 44-yard run.

Cleveland presented coach Blanton Collier with a retirement present in the form of a 27-13 triumph over Denver, with Bill Nelsen passing for two touchdowns and Bo Scott, a one-time Ottawa Rough Rider, scoring two.

Sonny Jurgensen's passing and the running of Charley Harraway helped Washington to a 15-point lead over St. Louis and the Redskins held on for a 28-27 decision when Jim Bakken of the Cards, who earlier booted two long field goals, flubbed a 21-yarder with four minutes left.

Elsewhere, Minnesota trounced Atlanta 37-7, Chicago beat New Orleans 24-3 on Jack Concannon's three TD tosses, and Philadelphia snapped a tie in the final four minutes and defeated Pittsburgh 30-20.

Baltimore finished its regular season Saturday by whipping the Jets 35-20 as Earl Morrall threw four scoring passes.

Three of the Cougars made it an old form-finding weekend, and Victoria's British Columbia Junior Hockey League entry padded its cushion atop the Coastal Division with a pair of impressive victories over the trailing Chilliwack Bruins.

The Cougars cuffed the Bruins 13-1 Saturday night at Memorial Arena and then chalked up a 7-2 victory in Chilliwack on Sunday.

The series sweep stretched Victoria's first-place margin to eight points over Vancouver Centennials, the club that provides Cougars' next opposition. The top two clubs square off in Memorial Arena next Saturday.

The weekend outings also appeared to bring old form back to Scott Munro, Bruce Cowick and Darryl Fedorak.

Munro, out of action the previous week because of ineffective play, came back Saturday. Shifted to centre from his normal wing position, Munro flashed his best skating and scoring form of the season.

He skated two ways, pumped in three goals and set up a fourth to spearhead Victoria's 36-point assault. Ted Plowe also scored three goals to become the league's first 30-goal scorer.

Chris Riddell added a pair while Victoria's singles were chalked up by Cowick, Gerry Bond, Dale Pennock, Lon Miles and Pat Askew.

Davies Only Bruin Able to Score

Larry Davies, who counted all three goals against the Cougars during the weekend engagements, wrecked Ed Forslund's shutout hopes with a power-play effort in the first period of Saturday's game.

Davies scored both against Fedorak on Sunday, but the Cougars' alternate goaltender turned in a solid performance that delighted coach Ron Maxwell.

"While our club went very well," said Maxwell, "the Bruins still managed to give Fedorak some good testing. Darryl has been fighting himself during the past few weeks but his game Sunday was his best in some time."

Likewise Cowick, the big winger who shared club scoring honors with Plowe last season.

Cowick scored two goals Sunday but, with better breaks, might have connected for six. He had five clear-cut breakaways but was able to score on only one of them on Sunday. His other goal came on a deflection of a shot by Bond.

Plowe popped in his 31st goal on the Sabbath while Riddell, Randy Bock, Tom Keep and Rob Little supplied one apiece.

Keep and Cowick stood out as Victoria's best forwards Sunday. In addition to their constant pressure on Lee Hoium, Chilliwack's overworked goaltender, the pair turned in a robust hitting and checking display.

Flurries Helped For Clear Sailing

Sudden bursts enabled Cougars to cruise home in both games.

Getting a strong, early argument from Bruins, the Cats managed to come out of the first period Saturday with a 2-1 lead. They made it 3-1 early in the third, then broke it wide open with four goals in two minutes, 12 seconds.

Sunday, Bruins held Cougars to one goal in the first period. It was 3-1 for Victoria after the second but Davies' second goal early in the third period made it a 3-2 game.

Then the Cats cut loose again, scoring four times within a span of 6½ minutes.

In other weekend action, Kamloops Rockets also rang up a pair of victories, defeating Kelowna Buckaroos 5-2 on Saturday and 7-0 on Sunday. In the only other game, Bob Craig returned to Vernon's lineup and pumped in two goals as the Essos shot down the Okanagan Division-leading Penticton Broncos 7-2.

SHORT CHIPS: Plowe's five-point spree in the two games enabled the Cougar winger to move five points ahead of Penticton's Vic Mecredi in the individual scoring race ... Plowe now has 55 points ... Riddell and Pennock each enjoyed a six-point weekend ... Cougars announced that Dave Maynard, a goaltender with the affiliated Victoria junior "B" Cubs, has been loaned to Chilliwack for the balance of the season ... Cowick, Keep and Jim Lautenslager all will miss next Saturday's game against Vancouver ... The three have been given time off to spend Christmas with their families ... Lautenslager was the only Cougar who failed to pick up a point at the weekend.

Surgery on Finger

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Singer, Los Angeles Dodgers' pitcher, has undergone corrective surgery on his right index finger, injured in a game against Pittsburgh Pirates last August.

The team's orthopedic specialist, Dr. Fraank Jobe, said he believes Singer will be able to participate in spring training.

Wankel Captures $6,000 in 'Spiel

WINNIPEG — Doug Wankel of Elbow, Saskatchewan, won the Manisphere tournament of champions bonspiel Sunday night with a 7-5 victory over Bob Pickering of Milestone, Saskatchewan.

The Wankel rink won $6,000, the Pickering rink $2,500.

Bob Lemecha of Winnipeg took third place with a 10-8 victory over Ron Northcott of Calgary.

Pickering defeated Lemecha in one semi-final and Wankel edged Northcott, 7-5, in the other. Lemecha won $1,000 and Northcott $500.

Pickering had the best record in the 16-team round-robin, and finished on top of the "B" division with a 6-1 record. Wankel, in the same division, had a 5-2 record. In the "A" side, Lemecha and Northcott finished with 5-2 records. World champion Don Duguid of Winnipeg had a 2-5 record. Lyall Dagg of Vancouver was 3-4.

Turning point in the Wankel-Pickering final came when Wankel stole two in the seventh end. Pickering was wide on his last shot and skidded through the house.

Other members of the winning Wankel rink were Ernie Vaughan, third; Art Knutson, second, and Gay Knutson, lead. Playing with Pickering were Garnet Campbell, third; Jack Keys, second, and Sid Gardiner, lead.

DUNNELL STEPS DOWN

TORONTO (CP) — The Star announced that Jim Proudfoot has been appointed sports editor, succeeding Milt Dunnell.

FIFTH PLAYER in National Basketball Association history to reach career mark of 20,000 points is Jerry West, who topped that figure as he helped Los Angeles Lakers defeat Hawks 116-104 Saturday in Atlanta. West entered game needing 17 points to hit 20,000 and collected 36. Others over mark are Elgin Baylor, Wilt Chamberlain, Oscar Robertson and retired Bob Pettit.

Leafs Threaten Canucks' Hold On Fourth Spot

By The Canadian Press

Punch Imlach, the sage of Buffalo Sabres, was rapped recently on the ground that his writing in a syndicated column might cause embarrassment to Toronto Maple Leafs.

But after the weekend, Imlach might even consider re-editing the script he had penned earlier. His Buffalo club was stopped twice by the Leafs, 2-0 at Toronto Saturday and 4-2 in Buffalo Sunday.

The victories extended Toronto's winning streak to six, three at the expense of the punchless Sabres, and moved them to within two points of fourth-place Vancouver Canucks in the National Hockey League's East Division.

Boston Bruins and New York Rangers at the top of the East Division had double victories during the weekend while Chicago Black Hawks padded their lead in the West.

The Bruins throttled West Division opponents, winning 7-1 over St. Louis Blues Saturday and 7-2 against Minnesota North Stars Sunday as John McKenzie went on a five-goal scoring spree. The Bruins' eight-game win streak is their longest in at least 20 years.

A Bruins spokesman said Sunday night the NHL records office will have to let Boston know when it last won eight consecutive games.

He said no official club records are available prior to the 1951-52 season although the team lists its consecutive-game winning streak as 14, set by the championship team of 1929-30.

"We had an unbeaten string of 18 games last season, but we didn't even win seven straight. . . . The club record may go all the way back some 40 years."

New Yorkers Clip Vancouver 5-1

The Rangers dumped Vancouver 5-1 Sunday at home after a 5-3 win against the North Stars Saturday in Bloomington, Minn.

Expansion teams took the measure of Detroit Red Wings at the expense of rookie goaltenders Don McLeod and Jim Rutherford. McLeod was in goal Saturday, as Pittsburgh Penguins hung a 9-1 shellacking on the Wings, then shared duty with Rutherford Sunday during a 7-3 loss to California Golden Seals.

Chicago nipped Pittsburgh 2-1 on third-period goals by Pit Martin and Bobby Hull to extend their winning streak on home ice to 13 games and move nine points ahead of St. Louis. Los Angeles Kings drubbed Montreal Canadiens 7-2 to snap their winless streak at 11 in another Sunday game.

The Kings were held to a 2-2 tie by Philadelphia Saturday.

Tuesday, New York visits Buffalo and Chicago is at Oakland against the Golden Seals.

NHL president Clarence Campbell took Imlach, Buffalo's general manager and coach, to task recently for his journalistic efforts. Leaf president Stafford Smythe, who fired Imlach 1½ years ago, had complained that the Sabres' leader had undermined Toronto players with his writings which appear in a Toronto newspaper.

Earlier in the season, Imlach, noted during his 10 seasons with the Leafs as a great prophet, promised that his club would finish ahead of Toronto in the standings.

For Plante, 75th Career Shutout

The Leafs were making his forecast look good. They floundered with Buffalo near or in the division cellar until their current six-game spree carried them to within two points of Vancouver who, like Buffalo, are in the first NHL season.

Dave Keon, the Leafs' veteran centre and captain, scored the winner Saturday and the go-ahead goal Sunday as the Sabres, as they often do, floundered in the latter stages. Jacques Plante registered his 75th career shutout in Saturday's game, turning aside 24 shots.

McKenzie, the one-time cowboy from Nanton, Alta., scored three Sunday while team-mate Phil Esposito added two, making him the league's first 30-goal scorer this year. The North Stars opened the scoring and held a 2-1 lead before the Bruins stormed into the lead with Esposito and McKenzie leading the blitz.

Basil's Great Batting Rescues English Side

ADELAIDE (AP) — Magnificent batting by 39-year-old veteran Basil d'Oliveira allowed the Marylebone Cricket Club to draw its cricket match against South Australia today.

D'Oliveira came to the crease when the English side was in trouble with four wickets down for 91 and he went on to make 162 not out.

MCC, set to score 398 in 350 minutes to win, made 366 for 8 in the second innings.

It was the second century d'Oliveira had made against South Australia this tour. In the previous clash, when the tour opened, d'Oliveira hit 103 not out to save the game.

On Sunday, South Australia's Greg Chappell hit three sixes off four balls from left-hand spinner Derek Underwood and went on to score the fastest century in first-class cricket this season.

He was retired at 102 after batting for 118 minutes.

Ian Chappell declared the South Australia innings closed with seven wickets down for 338.

South Australia had declared at 297 for two wickets in its first innings and MCC scored 238 in its first.

FRENCH GIRL WINS . . . . . GIANT SLALOM

Betsy Finishes Fifth

LES CONTAMINES, France (Reuter) — French World Cup holder Michele Jacot won the women's giant slalom at the Grand Prix skiing event here today.

Barbara Cochran of the United States was second.

Betsy Clifford of Ottawa, who won the women's special slalom at Val d'Isere last week, finished fifth with a time of 1:28.79.

Miss Jacot was clocked in 1:27.75 and Miss Cochran in 1:28.03. Third was Sandra Poulsen of the U.S. in 1:28.75 and Britt Lafforgue of France was fourth in 1:28.77.

The classy international field moved here from Val d'Isere, where Karl Cordin of Austria shattered the course record Sunday to win the Second World Cup downhill event of the season.

Cordin, 22, was clocked at two minutes, 9.08 seconds for the 3.298-metre course, more than four seconds better than last year's record of 2:13.79, set by Malcolm Milne of Australia.

French star Bernard Ocrel, 25, was just over a half-second behind in 2:09.62, closely followed by Austria's veteran champion Karl Schranz.

Henri Duvillard of France, fifth in 2:10.19, maintained his World Cup standings lead with 44 points after three events. But the gap is closing rapidly with Orcel, 40 points, and Schranz, 38, hard on his heels.

The next men's World Cup races, special and giant slaloms, are at Berchtesdagen, Germany, Jan. 5-6.

Orangemen Share Lead

Orangemen needed a little help from Red Barons on Sunday to claim a share of first place with Tigers in the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey League.

While Orangemen were blanking Oak Bay Fossils 4-0, Red Barons held Tigers to a scoreless draw.

Uvic downed Esquimalt Rebels 5-1 in the only other league match.

Bob Raine and Dan Owen each scored two goals for Orangemen.

Steve Lane led Uvic with three goals while Brian Alquire scored the other two. Don Tourangeau averted a shutout for Rebels.

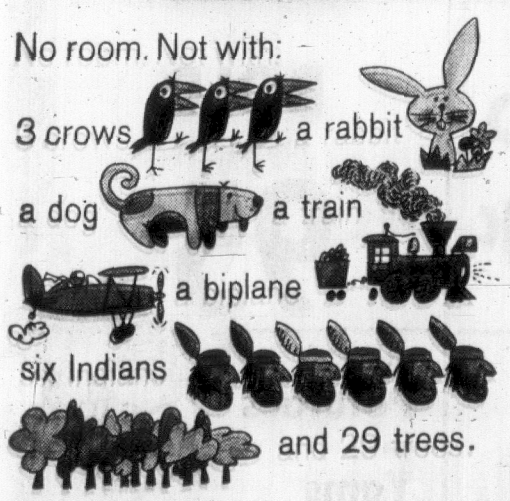
No partridge. No pear tree.

No room. Not with:



It's too bad about the partridge. And the pear tree. We'd add them if we could – just to make our jolly old green-and-red label even more Christmasy. But you can see the problem. We're a little pushed for space. So instead, we'll simply wish you a warm and wonderful Yuletide from all of us here at Molson's. From the rabbit. And the crows. And the dog. Oh, yes – and the people.

Tailor Gift Helps United Retain Two-Point Margin

Generosity that is traditionally part of the Christmas season has helped Victoria United retain a two-point margin at the top of the Pacific Coast Soccer League tree.

Contributing to the joy of United supporters were the men who work for Paul's Tailors, who dropped a 2-1 decision to the Victoria squad Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

Victory over the Vancouver squad boosted the United lead to four points but the advantage was sliced in half Sunday on the mainland when second-place Eintracht blasted New Westminster Blues 4-2 at Empire Stadium.

Peter Arnett led Eintracht with two goals while singles were added by Rifet Malkoc and Buzzy Parsons. Chris Duynstee scored both Blues' goals after Eintracht had taken a 3-0 lead at the intermission.

SCORELESS DRAW

Columbus and North Shore played to a scoreless tie in the other Sunday match and Croatia downed UBC Thunderbirds 6-3 in a Saturday tussle.

Berry Crilic scored three goals to lead Croatia while singles were chipped in by Harold Hansen, Mimi Ficic and John Connor. Garry Thompson (2) and Robin Elliot scored for UBC.

United coach Frank Grealy admitted he was "nervous" while watching his crew collect Saturday's victory before 300 fans.

"This was the first time this season our back four didn't come up with a strong effort," he said after the match.

United opened scoring after five minutes with an assist from Tailors' defender Mike Jackson, who headed a shot by George Hyne into his own goal.

Ike MacKay produced what turned out to be the winning goal 31 minutes into the second half and Geoff McCormick spoiled United goalie Barry Sadler's chances for a league-leading fourth shutout with a minute remaining.

Brian Robinson almost connected for United after two minutes but was stopped on the line by fullback Ian Downs. Bob Bolitho then missed another chance by booting the rebound off the crossbar.

TELFORD IN ACTION

A combination play then set up the opening goal as Bolitho passed the ball to MacKay, who put Hyne through the defence on the right side. Hyne was crossing to unchecked Jan Bentley on the other side of the goal when Jackson conveniently, for Victoria, put his head to work.

Ray Telford, seeing his first action since fracturing a leg in the first game of the season, shared in the second goal after taking a pass from Hyne.

Telford lofted the ball to the penalty spot and MacKay connected while the ball was still airborne and beat the defence cleanly.

McCormick collected the lone Tailor tally from 18 yards out through a crowd of players after accepting a pass from winger Jim Ramsay.

Referee Bill Miller ended up by booking United captain Sadler on the play. Linesman Don Hughes momentarily put his flag up on the scoring shot and Sadler argued for an offside. When Miller refused the request, Sadler kicked the ball away.

Ken Phillips, punting star with B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League who got his soccer schooling in the mainland minor leagues, stepped into action as a netminder, replacing starting goalie Gerry Macey, who suffered a shoulder injury at 36 minutes while making a diving save against MacKay.

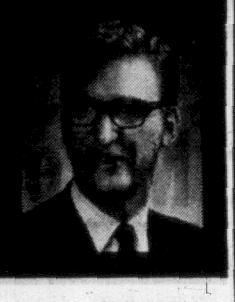
IMPORT REPORT

By DAVID CARERE



This Is A True Story:

There is a Captain and a Petty Officer on board one of our local destroyer escorts, who both own Datsuns. This is a true story of what happened a short time ago in the Straits of Juan De Fuca.

When two large vessels approach one another within 1,000 yards, the Officer of the deck must notify the Captain, if he is not on the bridge, of the presence of the other ship. On the particular day in question, the before mentioned Petty Officer noticed a large vessel approaching with the word "DATSUN" on the side. He notified the Captain that there was "A 26,000-TON 'DATSUN' approaching from the starboard beam." The Captain asked, "A 26,000-ton WHAT?" The Petty Officer replied again, "A 26,000-ton DATSUN Sir." This was, of course, too much for the Captain to accept. He scrambled to the bridge and sure enough there was a DATSUN—cargo freighter — just one of five such ships owned by Nissan, bringing 1300 Datsuns to Canada each trip.

ROAD TEST MAGAZINE 1971 PRODUCT OF NISSAN DATSUN 240-Z SPORTS CAR OF THE YEAR AWARD

After considerable deliberation, "ROAD TEST" MAGAZINE awarded the Datsun 240-Z their "Sports Car of the Year" award for 1971. Road Test says, "What at first appeared to us to be a difficult choice gradually evolved into a technical knock-out once every factor involved was evaluated . . . and once again we find that demand exceeding supply supports our case. We apologize for embarrassing Nissan, but the 240-Z was our only possible choice.

Heather Sets Scoring Pace

Heather Witzel, scoring ace with University of Victoria Vikettes last season, has sparked University of Saskatchewan Huskiettes into a tie for first place in the current Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association women's basketball league campaign.

With the teams idle until league play resumes Jan. 15, Miss Witzel leads the individual scoring race with 89 points in six games, one point ahead of Lethbridge University's Leona Voth.

Huskiettes and Manitoba Bisonettes share the top berth with 10 points. Lethbridge is two points off the pace and two ahead of the fourth-place pair of Alberta and University of B.C.

Vikettes, with one victory in four starts, have two points and are tied with Regina for sixth position in the eight-team league.

Bowl Matchup Ends In Draw

(Times News Service)

Leon Burns crashed through the Louisville line for his third touchdown and Long Beach State cashed in a two-point conversion pass Saturday as the 49ers came from behind in the fourth quarter to tie the Cardinals 24-24 in the 25th annual Pasadena Bowl at Pasadena, Calif.

The deadlock before a rain-reduced crowd of 20,472 in the inaugural post-season college football between the Missouri Valley Conference and the Pacific Coast Athletic Association was preserved when both teams failed on late field goal attempts.

At El Paso, Texas, Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets stopped Texas Tech's vaunted running attack and made their first visit to the Sun Bowl a success by defeating the Red Raiders 17-9.

Georgia Tech dashed Texas Tech's second-half effort, which had closed the score to 10-9, when reserve tailback Kevin McNamara bulled in from two yards out with 1:44 remaining in the game.

Champion Kayos Austin in Second

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — WQorld middleweight champion Carlos Monzon knocked out Charley Austin of Phoenix, Ariz., in the second round of their scheduled 10-round fitht in Luna Park stadium Saturday night.

It was the champion's first bout since he took the title from Nino Benvenuti in Rome Nov. 7.

YOUNG QUARRY WINS ANOTHER

WOODLAND HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Undefeated Mike Quarry, 19-year-old brother of heavyweight Jerry Quarry, won his 25th straight boxing triumph with a unanimous, 10-round victory over Amado Vazquez. Quarry, a student at Fullerton Junior College, is ranked the No. 7 light-heavyweight contender. He was in command all the way against the 25-year-old Vazquez, who now has a 22-4 won-lost record.

James Bay IV Trips Hornets

James Bay Athletic Association strengthened a grip on second place in the Victoria Rugby Union's second division by pounding Nanaimo Hornets 17-3 in the Hub City on Sunday.

James Bay led 5-3 at the half of the only VRU match of the weekend.

Rich White paced James Bay with two trys while single trys were added by Mark Waring and Ross Dawson. Mac Snoblen kicked a penalty goal for JBAA and Ray Ramsay added a conversion.

Derek Morgan accounted for all Hornets' points with a penalty goal.

Uvic Girls Sweep Series; Vikings Try

University of Victoria's Vikettes swept their exhibition holiday basketball series, and that's the target the Vikings are ogling tonight.

Vikettes downed Simon Fraser University 57-29 Saturday to sweep their weekend girls' series. The Uvic girls, overcoming a 23-12 deficit at half-time, marked up a 52-37 triumph on Friday at the Uvic gym.

Yvonne Letellier sparked Vikettes Saturday with 19 points. She had scored 14 points in Friday's game to wind up with 33 for the series.

Dierdre Ogden, who had a sparkling 18-point performance Friday, tossed in 12 points in Saturday's game and, along with Lynn Hagglund, was a dominant personality on defence.

Miss Hagglund picked off 14 rebounds while Miss Ogden grabbed 12 to account for 26 of the 45 rebounds the Vikettes picked off Saturday.

Coach Bob Bell's men's team rolls into action tonight with the first of a two-game series against Lewis and Clark of Oregon. The teams complete their Uvic gym meetings on Tuesday.

RUSSIANS BEAT FINNS

TAMPERE, Finland (AP) — The Soviet world champion hockey team Sunday night defeated Finland 6-4 in the first leg of Hockey International.

Soccer Teams Share Medals

BANGKOK (AP) — The Sixth Asian Games ended Sunday with most of the gold medals in Japanese hands, 49 new records on the books and defending soccer champion Burma and South Korea playing an overtime scoreless tie. Each received gold medals.

That gave Korea 18 golds and second place after the powerful Japanese contingent. The Koreans also had 13 silver medals and 23 bronzes, over-all significantly better than in the 196 games, in which Korea was 12-18-21.

Japan's final tally of 74 of the 137 golds plus 47 bronzes and 23 silvers was below its 1966 record of 78-53-33, but there were more events in the last games.

Thailand placed third in the medals race with nine golds, 17 silvers and 13 bronzes.

Iran, the 1974 games host, also had nine golds, India and Israel each had six and Malaysia five.

MANY RECORDS BROKEN

Of the 49 Asian Games records broken in the 11 days of competition, 33 were cracked by Japanese athletes. The Japanese broke 20 of the 22 records that fell in swimming, 10 of 19 in track, two of five in weightlifting and one of two in shooting.

Perhaps the standout individual performer of the games was Japan's 17-year-old girl swimmer, Yoshimi Nishigawa, who broke records in the women's 100- and 200-metre freestyle races and the 200-metre individual medley, and picked up two additional gold medals as a member of record-breaking freestyle and medley relay teams.

One of the biggest disappointments was the injury which kept sprint queen Chi Cheng of Nationalist China from winning the five golds she was expected to take. She arrived in Bankok with a pulled left leg muscle, pulled a right leg muscle on the first day of competition and still managed to win the gold in the women's 100-metre dash. But another pulled left leg muscle, suffered when she was far ahead in the 400-metre run, forced her out of all competition until at least April.

TRUST NOBODY

That's a Jungle Yonder, Dearie

By Jack Scott

Somewhere in our town today there's a lonely widow in her late fifties or early sixties, a woman with a nice little financial nest-egg or maybe a nice big one, who had better plan right now on making a firm and fast New Year's resolution.

It would go more or less like this: "I will trust no one, I will be suspicious of every man, however nice or honest a face he may have, until I am convinced of his integrity—and even then I will be suspicious as all hell. Above all, I will sign nothing in 1971."

It's too late now for the dear old thing who signed up for $5,000 in lessons on how to do the tango and samba, or the nice trusting girl who was promised the 30 per cent return in that certain mutual fund and saw every last dime disappear, or the charming old thing who believed it when the man volunteered to fix her chimney for $30 and somehow the bill ballooned to $3,000.

Scott

The lonely Victoria widow who has yet to be had — and won't be, hopefully, if she hews to her new year's resolution — will be taking the advice of a man who, every working day of his life, is reminded of the terrible vulnerability of our town's older folks as the prey of petty larcenists, franchised pirates, hard-sell gimmick artists, soft-sell con men and assorted other fast-buck bandits.

As manager of Vancouver Island's Better Business Bureau since its inception eight years ago, W. D. "Bill" Tindall, a handsome, silvering, 49-year-old man trying hard to hold on to his illusions, has seen first hand the tragedy that's wrought by the corrupting two per cent of the population that's dedicated to fleecing the remaining 98 per per cent. It's a tragedy particularly heart-breaking when the victims are ancient.

"We're unique in this because we're a retirement city, a Mecca for the old who have the money to come here and those who follow them to relieve them of it," Tindall sighs. "In today's society it is the older person who is the most trusting, the most-swindle-prone. Statistically the widows outnumber the men — women, usually, without practical experience in handling money — and they're the most susceptible of all."

★ ★ ★

In terms of sheer money volume the bulk of the loot goes to what Tindall describes as "the self-styled business advisor or counsellor." The good name of reputable investment companies and the policing of the superintendent of securities are meaningless when the lone operator may freely identify himself as "an investment broker," promise a return of anything from 18 to 30 per cent and let the covetous nature of man take its course.

Item: A Victorian hands over $8,000, as first mortgage money, paying 12 per cent, collectable monthly, to a man who describes himself as "a realtor." He decides, too late, to have a title search on the property. He is fifth in line in the list of suckers who hold first mortgages. Unexpectedly, the property is sold to wind up an estate. Only two of the victims recover their money. The "realtor" has disappeared.

"The frightening thing," says Bill Tindall, "is that for every such case that surfaces there are anywhere from 15 to 20 that don't. Older people, particularly, have too much pride to admit to an act of stupidity. For that reason, all we see of the swindles is the tip of the iceberg and, God knows, the tip is impressive enough."

Less in the big money category, but equally insidious, is the gimmick of dance studios and social clubs that appeal directly to the lonely widow.

Tindall: "There is the handsome male instructor, just as you'd expect, telling the poor dear what talent she has, how wonderful she's doing in the introductory lesson, and before they know it, they've signed on the dotted line for as many as four overlapping contracts to the extent of $3,000 or more. The record — that we know of! — is a woman nearly 60 years of age who found herself with $5,000 in lessons on a signed, unbreakable contract."

In the Bureau's files at this red hot moment is the case of a woman who paid $2,200 in advance for 180 weeks of lessons. When she failed to receive a receipt for her money she went to the manager. For bookkeeping purposes, said he, the money was in a separate account. But if she would give him a further $2,800 he would give her a promissory note for $5,500, repayable in three months at eight per cent interest. Incredibly, she did. The note was written on the ornate letterhead of a company that doesn't exist. It didn't matter. The lad was long gone once the cheque was cashed.

★ ★ ★

Then there are the social clubs, the lonely-heart gathering places where the two-dollar registration fee may suddenly get to be a signed-up $240, three out of four of the other lonely hearts are also hopeful widows and the net result of the investment is to be exposed, at their own expense, to the predators. (One such club, with a $20 registration fee, guarantees a date with a compatible, eligible bachelor and they fulfill the contract, too, except, it seems, that it's the same, tired bachelor who handles them all.)

Ah, but you needn't go out to be taken. Just wait right there at home. They'll come to you.

"Each winter it's the same," Tindall explains with a trace of weariness. "The so-called home-improvement contractors leave the prairie ice and snow to come here and work a new territory, then drift back again when the summer comes. The pitch is always the same. The fellow has seen that your chimney could use a little work. Would you like him to look at it? He comes down with a handful of loose mortar, tells you it's dangerous, could be fixed for only $30. That begins it. He finds that the whole roof needs to be replaced, the downspouts are shot, the field tile has gone and quite sensible people find themselves with a $4,000 commitment that began at $30. The work, needed or not, is never done. If you can find him he'll tell you that he never said when he'd do it. But you rarely find him or the money that went with him."

Another dandy, also an elusive itinerant, is the man with the magic spray "sealing solution" to rid the roof of moss. Usual price: $75. Usual result: A lifetime mess of oil, tar and gasoline. One man with an old truck can handle a house per hour with five dollars worth of magic spray per house and retire to parts unknown with a handsome profit and the certainty that no one will catch up with him.

Bill Tindall will tell you that the city licence laws should be tightened up to squeeze out the incompetent and the known dishonest, but that's unlikely so long as licensing is more a revenue-producer than a protector.

Meanwhile, his advice, to young and old alike, is just this: "Love the human race and be on your guard at all times."

BECAUSE OF BUSINESS POSITIONS

Some Have More Votes Than Others

100 Victorians Hold Privilege

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

There is no ceiling on the number of votes a person may cast in a municipal election.

It is theoretically possible for 50 people to cast 1,000 ballots without breaking the law.

The only limitation is the number of corporations in which a man or woman is a prominent figure, and is chosen as the corporation's voter.

In other words, the more influential positions in business a man holds, the more votes he is likely to control.

This is borne out by the 1970-71 voters list for the municipality of Victoria, which contains more than 100 examples of people with two votes or more.

There are at least 100 electors with two votes, four with three votes, two with four votes and one man who can cast five ballots.

The man with the most votes in a Victoria election is G. J. Stewart, who lives in Oak Bay at 3145 Sheringham.

He is the designated voting agent for Associated Building Credits Ltd., Chemainus Properties Ltd., Hiview Investments Ltd., Stewart and Hudson Ltd., and Parkside Towers Ltd.

The two men with four votes each are H. B. Elworthy and G. I. Edgelow. Elworthy may vote as an owner-elector as well as agent for Island Tug and Barge, Princess Mary Restaurant, and the Imperial Inn.

Edgelow can vote as a tenant-elector and as agent for T. Admark Ltd., Current Events Publishing Ltd., and Farm News Ltd.

Eric Charman, 1632 Rockland, can vote as a resident from that address and once each for Charman Pacific Realty Ltd. and General Mortgage Corp. Ltd.

H. Lou Poy may vote as an owner-elector and as agent for Hook Sin Tong Charity, and Pioneer Fruit and Vegetable Co. Ltd.

K. King can vote as agent for these three companies: Maple Room Catering Service, Hotel Douglas Co. Ltd., and Pandora Enterprises.

G. B. Mackenzie, 1551 Rockland, can vote once as an owner-elector and once each for the Royal Bank of Canada and Globe Realty Corp. which is a wholly owned subsidiary of the bank.

Too Much Legal Paperwork

W. C. Mearns, 3245 Beach Drive in Oak Bay, can vote in Victoria as a property owner and as agent for the British Columbia Electric Company which was taken over by the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority early in the 1960s.

Changing the titles over, says Victoria solicitor Terry O'Grady would involve a prohibitive amount of legal paperwork.

G. S. Wallace is included in the Victoria voting list as both tenant-elector and owner-elector with the address given as 1494 Fairfield.

Similarly, Robert W. Chard is listed as an owner-elector with the address given as 131-645 Fort, and as tenant elector, the given address being 645 Fort.

A man may not vote twice on the strength of two separately owned properties. In the Greater Victoria School District, however, there is no consolidated voting list. This means that on election day, an Oak Bay property owner could go to his Oak Bay polling station and cast votes for both Oak Bay Council and the school board, which this year began electing trustees at large from the four core municipalities.

The man might then proceed to a Victoria polling station to cast votes for Victoria aldermen on the strength of property ownership in that city or delegated voting authority from one or more corporations.

Along with the aldermanic ballots he would automatically receive another set of ballots for the school board.

There is no guard against this voting outside of a deterrent fine. The voter is expected to "declare" that he has already voted for the school board candidates.

The best and safest way to get lots of ballots into the ballot box, however, is to seek out men with several delegated voting rights.

If a man running for office in a large city wanted to campaign efficiently, he would spend his time persuading the most influential businessmen that he was a good choice. If he found 50 men who were agents for 20 companies each, or 100 men who were agents for 10 companies each, he might attract a valuable 1,000 votes. In the recent municipal election, candidate Alfred Hood needed only 15 more votes than he received to overtake Tom Christie and win an aldermanic seat.

If Hood had concentrated his campaign on 100 men who hold more than one vote in Victoria, he might have gone the distance.

Highway Claims Another

A 26-year-old Saanich woman became the ninth Patricia Bay Highway fatality in 14 months early Sunday morning.

Mrs. Winnifred Nimmo, of 3262 Shelley Street, was killed at about 1:50 a.m. when her small car left the highway and slammed into a power pole.

She was driving south on the Pat Bay in the region of Amity Drive when the accident occurred.

Mrs. Nimmo was at least the 17th person to die on the highway since 1964. Accurate statistics concerning road deaths on the Pat Bay Highway have never been compiled, says the Capital Region Safety Council, but Times files show a total of eight deaths in 1964 and nine in 1969-70.

Such statistics are available in the files of the three police departments which have jurisdiction over varying stretches of the highway but have never been compiled.

CRITICAL CONDITION

After another weekend accident, Ian Hawkes Frost, 62, of 1065 Burdett, was in critical condition today at St. Joseph's Hospital when the car he was driving collided with another at 4 p.m. Sunday at Wildwood and Ross.

His passenger, Maria Kolodensky, 48, of 1065 Burdett, was in good condition today with rib injuries.

Police said Frost was driving east on Ross when he collided with a car driven by Grant A. Mebs, 1320 Dallas. Mebs was not injured.

Meet Date On Arena Scheduled

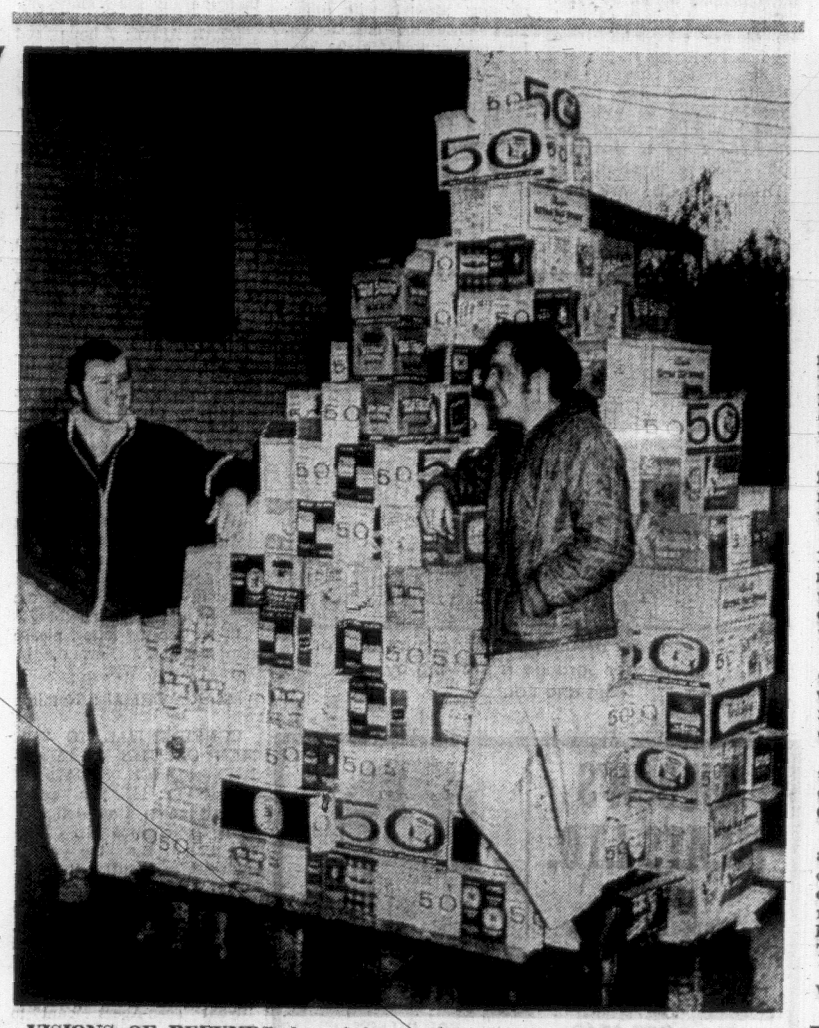
A public meeting will be held in three weeks to set the course for an arena in Langford-Colwood.

The meeting will be held Monday Jan. 11 at 8 p.m. in the gymnasium of Belmont senior secondary school, 3085 Jacklin, it was announced today.

A $750,000 referendum in Langford, Colwood and Metchosin was technically defeated earlier this month when Metchosin voters narrowly failed to give the arena the necessary 60 per cent majority. Colwood was 85 per cent in favor and Langford 83 per cent.

Purpose of the meeting is to see if residents want Langford and Colwood to go ahead on their own with the arena or hold a second referendum.

The arena was to be the Centennial 71 project in the Langford, Colwood and Metchosin area.



VISIONS OF REFUNDS danced in their heads while Jim Crawford and Dave Paterson of 1056 Foul Bay Rd. waited Saturday for the truck to haul the empties away. The 204 dozen beer bottles represent their consumption and that of a friend since about last July. Apart from a prodigious thirst, mountain of beer cases marks a catholic taste. There are 12 brands represented. (Irving Strickland Photo)

Bunn Charge Wrong Counters City Engineer

City engineer Jim Garnett today accused school trustee Peter Bunn of making "erroneous" statements about government stupidity concerning sewer connections that increased costs at Burnside Elementary.

Bunn, chairman of the school board's building and grounds committee and a contractor himself, cited two examples of city bungling which he said cost ratepayers an extra $1,800 for sewer work.

Despite earlier approval by city engineers of sewer and storm drain connections, the plumbing inspector demanded a change in design and the subsequent increase in drain size cost an additional $800 for a distribution centre being built near Burnside Elementary.

He also charged the city told architects about a sewer that turned out to be non-existent and an extra sewer connection cost $400.

"His statements are quite erroneous," Garnett said.

"I think Mr. Bunn should do his homework before he makes such statements."

Garnett said a school board architect's error which neglected to take into consideration private property in the area led to a request that sewer pipe be laid at a different level to avoid excess excavation of rock.

To lay the pipe and still comply with regulations a new size of pipe was required.

He said the school board was "warned both verbally and in writing" of the possibility that another sewer connection might not exist. It was decided to go ahead on the chance that it might be there, and when it wasn't a standard connection was made.

Bunn originally said aimlessness and indecision by the province were also responsible for increases totalling more than $50,000 at Braefoot and Vic West schools.

"I'm sure that if I sat down and added them all up, the bill for stupidity in the past two years would be well over $100,000," Bunn said.

He said the school board, however, "really quite an efficient body of people, is being made to look silly by senior levels of government."

Pool Won't Be Ready For National Meets

Victoria's new swimming pool won't likely be completed in time for the national swim meets in July, it was learned today.

Construction of the pool in Central Park has been plagued by problems resulting from labor disputes and stoppages of work during the summer.

The last date for completion given in September by project coordinator John DiCastri was June 5, but an informed source now says this date is almost impossible to meet.

The city has been pressed by the B.C. Amateur Swimming Association for confirmation that the pool will be ready in time for practice swimming by June 26.

It was hoped the pool's first weeks of use would include the 1971 Canadian Summer Nationals and the B.C. Centennial '71 International Swim Meet.

The pool was originally scheduled to be completed this week, but following labor problems this summer, the date was put forward to June, and the B.C. swim association was told it could expect use of the pool then.

Now, however, the June 5 date is also doubtful.

Oak Bay Sewage May Be Diverted

The McMicking Point sewer system in Oak Bay may be diverted to the Clover Point outfall when the new Clover Point system is completed.

Victoria city council will be asked in the new year to return its authority over city sewage matters to the Capital Regional District so a study can be made on joining the systems.

The connection would avoid the necessity of building more than one treatment plant in the area.

Victoria is seeking approval from the provincial government for an extension to the Clover Point outfall to be used before and while a treatment plant is built.

The new Clover Point system would also receive sewage that now runs from James Bay into the Inner Harbor and from part of the city into Rock Bay in the Upper Harbor.

Ban Ordered on Deadly Chemistry Sets

Toy chemistry sets containing deadly cyanide crystals have been ordered off the shelves in a Victoria store after having been discovered by an inspector in the federal consumer affairs department.

The sets were found during one of the routine checks made by the department.

The discovery underlines the necessity for the act now being prepared by Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford which will put more teeth into the Hazardous Products Act, passed earlier this year.

The new act will tighten up regulations designed to prevent the importing of dangerous toys.

A Victoria inspector said that a brand of baby rattles was also banned earlier this month.

•

"These were musical rattles that were easily taken apart. When they were opened up we found that inside was a whole bunch of metal spikes around which a small ball rotated in order to create the music."

The federal department has three inspectors based in Victoria.

One is concerned with primary products, such as butter and eggs, along with his duties as food and drug inspector.

A weights and measures inspector checks for inaccuracies in such things as electricity and gas accounting while the third man enforces the Hazardous Products Act.

The pressure on the four men grows as consumers become more concerned with their rights as consumers.

Hanson explains: "With the consumer revolution, people are waking up. This creates its own problem. The phone calls increase and we find ourselves with neither the staff nor the necessary power to police it."

•

All the major outlets in Victoria have been given a "clean bill of health" regarding the condemned chemistry sets and baby rattles.

But until a law demands a more rigid inspection of imported goods there is always the risk of other dangerous products being put on sale.

Store personnel are as anxious as their customers that the law be passed quickly.

Among them is toy department manager for one of the large stores, Jim Hollier, who has spent 20 years in the toy industry.

"Once the act is passed these things will be checked before they have a chance to reach the shelves. This is a good thing—we must protect our children."

Hollier welcomes the routine checks of the inspectors, who are given full access to the department. "We don't take them on any Russian guided tour."

FERRY RUNS STEPPED UP

British Columbia government ferries will step up their sailing schedules today between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen and Horseshoe Bay and Nanaimo.

The hourly sailings—instead of the present two-hour service—will continue through the holidays to Jan. 3.

Women Blamed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is always criticizing women. He says the worst thing that ever happened to this country is when they gave women the right to vote. He says they are nowhere near as intelligent as men, and all women should be kept pregnant or barefoot.

Whenever he sees a driver do something dumb, he says, "That has got to be a dame!" He blames everything from the San Francisco earthquake to the Chicago fire on the stupidity of women. Next time he starts up with me about how dumb women are, what can I say to shut him up? — Belle In Brooklyn.

DEAR BELLE: Ask him why he didn't remain a bachelor.

DEAR ABBY: When I went overseas I had a girl who promised she would wait for me. We went together since eighth grade. Her letters kept me going, and I slept with her picture next to my heart every night. After I got home I found out she had been Everybody knew it but me. running around with other guys since the day I left. Her mother told me she kept on writing to me like everything was the same between us because she didn't want to break down my spirits while I was away.

She's getting married to a guy she's only known a month. I still love her, Abby. Please tell me how I can get over her?—Gone To Pot.

DEAR GONE: You can get over her by facing the facts. She is marrying someone else. If she started to run around on you the day after you left, she's no bargain. Better to have had a cheating girl friend than a cheating wife. Maybe you're luckier than the guy she's marrying.

DEAR ABBY: I have read with much interest through the years of your encounters will women who write, "My husband likes to wear lace panties, what shall I do?" Or, is my husband perverted because he sleeps in a nylon nightie?" Your answers usually reflect wisdom and compassion.

I am a 49-year-old man who has been wearing women's clothing for at least 4 years. I find much comfort in a corset, nylons and bloomers under my male attire.

My wife is very understanding, and has always helped me to obtain feminine clothing. We have raised three fine children. I am very masculine (outwardly) and have been a semi-trailer driver, racing car driver, and I enjoy other manly sports. I have never had any type of homosexual tendencies or desires. So, as long as I don't bother anybody, what is wrong with dressing as I wish in the privacy of my home?

If you use my letter, please sign me ... Normal, In Beaver Dam, Wis.

DEAR NORMAL: Nothing.

CONFIDENTIAL TO THE MEN OF THE 8th SECURITY POLICE SQUADRON (COMBAT): If you aren't putting me on, I am delighted to be your pinup girl of the month. But the above addresss is insufficient. Individuality Built In

It is perfectly true that the greatest house bargains are found in developments. A builder employing large crews of workmen and taking advantage of quantity discounts on building materials, can keep costs at a lower level than the individual homeowner.

However, once you have bought your development house, you can rework the interiors to make your home different from your neighbor's.

Shown here is a house that was made completely individual, the interiors by designer Carole Eichen. Originally, the sloping roof provided the room's architectural interest and made the relatively small room seem more spacious. Plywood, grooved to look like 1"x4" tongue and groove siding, was installed on the tall wall for texture.

Major changes came on the fireplace wall, with bookcases, cabinets and a fireplace added. The fireplace is simple, the opening surrounded by fifteen-inch concrete slumpstone, framed in turn by rough sawn 4"x4" beams stained brown.

On each side, shelves of 1"x8"s extend six feet towards the fireplace, leaving a four foot space between them, just right for a large picture.

A 2"x8" upright helps support the shelves, and a two inch facing continues the line up to the ceiling.

The uprights stand on base cabinets seventeen inches deep, five feet wide and two feet high. These function as end tables for the two sofas and the bottom bookshelves were placed high enough to allow space for a lamp on each cabinet.

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer,

Please tell me what is meant by a ribbon skirt, Some of my friends keep talking about them and I would like to make one if only I knew what they meant. —Mrs. F.E.

Dear Mrs. F.E.:

The first time I saw a ribbon skirt was in New York about a year ago. They are rather costly for a manufacturer to make and consequently are found in the more exclusive boutiques.

A ribbon skirt consists of one ribbon after another, placed horizontally, until you have the correct length. They can be a combination of stripes, velvets, grosgains, brocade, or whatever, just so they are in a pleasing color combination. They should be varied because you don't want them to look like fabric.

You will usually need 1¼ to 1½ yards of each ribbon. Zigzag them together, or if you don't have a sewing machine with a zigzag stitch, place a strip of seam tape under the ribbon and machine stitch the ribbon to the centre of the seam tape. Proceed by placing the next ribbon right next to the previous one and machine stitching it to the tape. You won't need side seams, just a centre back seam for the zipper closing.

You may eliminate some of the fullness by placing an inverted pleat at the centre front, easing the skirt to the waistband with gathers, or laying some small folds at the waist. If there is too much fabric for your figure, take a few short darts to eliminate some of the fullness just below the waistline.

These skirts are fun to make and to wear because they are your very own creativity and color combination. They can be very dressy or almost casual by adding a shirt blouse or a lace blouse, depending on the occasion. Try one, they're fun!

Wastebasket Overfloweth With Words We Never Read

A bizarre collection of press releases comes into newspaper offices daily. Most are thrown out but a few gems are filed temporarily.

These eventually get thrown out in the year-end clean-up, but this year's assortment includes a few worth sharing.

The Cigar Institute of Canada leads off with a strong candidate for gem of the year:

"There have been many famous fathers since Adam's time. Some are known for having lived a long time, others for having many children."

Also from the prolific typewriter of the same author came this inspired paragraph:

"The Bible doesn't say what Eve gave to Adam on Father's Day but it could very well have been a present to bring pleasure and relaxation to the world's first Dad."

Mothers get the sentimental treatment from a florist's publicity release:

"Who isn't at a loss for words on Mothers' Day? Well, perhaps mother herself. It's the one day of the year when there's no ignoring the fact that every child has a debt too great to repay and a heartful of sentiment too deep to communicate in mere words."

It goes on about children young and old seeking to "communicate filial love in it's purest form," and famous mothers like Whistler's, and Zsa Zsa's, Madame Dionne and Phyllis Diller.

To counteract the sentimental approach, there is the stern "Take a good look at yourself in the mirror," or the mood of gay enthusiasm, like this one from a New York advertising agency:

"Just think—an apron for use in the kitchen will soon be available on a roller completely disposable, like paper towels!"

Fashion publicity writers are best at this "isn't-it-the-greatest" style:

"No doubt about it, the fur-for-all movement is booming and zooming. This season, furs will be flying—high, wide and handsome."

A New York hairdresser sent out a beauty bulletin urging positive thinking:

"Keneth says 'Think Fun-ky (sic) for Fall.' Funky is a life-style."

Without studying the three-page treatise thoroughly it is difficult to assess the value of funkyness as a life style.

As a hair style, it is short-long and "looks as if the wearer just ran her fingers through it and came up with an amusing disarray of playful prettiness."

To end on a philosophical note for consumers, a release from the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada says, "A walk through the aisles of a modern supermarket with its displays of attractively packaged merchandise frequently prompts the shopper to wonder where, and how, new products originate."

Any shopper who has been prompted to wonder about this instead of prices can be reassured that, "Products don't just appear as if by magic. There are reasons . . ."

So much for stories-we-never-finished-reading.

To ward off winter chills fashionably, Shrier has introduced the 'printed sheepskin.' The mosaic design shown here, is trimmed with icelandic fur.

His and Hers midi-length sheepskins are designed by Montreal's Julius Schrier. With linked closures and raised stitching detail, it's classically modern. These would make any mother and father happy on Christmas Day.—(CP Wirephotos).

Young Germans Fight War Toy Tradition

COLOGNE (UPI) — Students and youth organizations here, campaign against war toys under West German Christmas trees.

In the past decades: and even after the Second World War which turned this nation into rubble and ruins, many German parents still could not resist placing war toys under the trees. They included miniature fighter planes, tanks, rockets, tin soldiers and other things "glorifying war" — as the students and youth organizations say. This year the youths spare no effort finally to bring this "evil tradition" to an end.

In line with their anti-war toy campaign, they are offering to give bikes, mini-cars, mini-trains, mini-computers and other toys to the small fry in return for the tin soldiers, tanks and other "war toys." Several Cologne toy shops will neither display war toys nor sell them this yuletide. The students and youths groups said they were confident their campaign would spread to other parts of the nation.

Old Jerusalem Sheep Skins Inspired Retired Canadian

MONTREAL (CP) — Because he chased a strange women through a Helsinki airport nearly two years ago, Julius Schrier today has what he says is a fashion first.

His brainchild, a supple snowy-white sheepskin coat in several styles for men and women, is just starting to appear on winter sidewalks, but Schrier is already planning to hit the market next year with something even newer.

The 1971 specialty will be printed and tapestry velvet sheepskin coats, designed to promote the bulky skins from their traditionally sport level to that of high fashion.

The idea, which Schrier says he "instinctively" felt was right for Canadians, began to glimmer two years ago during a visit to Jerusalem. He noticed many people wearing crudely-made sheepskin vests which had been sewn by Arabs and were in an off-white color.

One of the vests' more striking characteristics, however, was the smell. The Arabs had rubbed the skins in salt and sawdust but they were still "pretty hard to get close to."

Schrier later spotted a tall woman, dressed in a sheepskin coat of similar color but with the seams inside to give a sleeker appearance, striding through an airport in Finland.

LOOKED AT CUT

"I ran after her to get as close as possible to see how the coat was made," he said in an interview Wednesday.

Returning home to Montreal, he abandoned his newly-achieved state of retirement and decided to make white sheepskin coats.

He soon discovered the only sheepskin available to Canada was intended for lining slippers and ski boots. An organization in Colorado later agreed to supply several carloads of skins.

Technicians toyed with the curing and tanning process until they could produce soft, white skins. Furriers were hired and by spring, 1970, Jukie Inc. was on its way.

In the last nine months, stores across Canada and the U.S. have snapped up 20,000 of the "impractical" coats that Schrier's friends warned him would never sell.

The manufacturing schedule for 1971 calls for 25,000 white coats plus about 5,000 colored and printed styles.

Schrier says cleaning is no problem. Sandpaper or steel wool dipped in baby powder removes grime easily.

Cooks Should Use Caution At Christmas

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — When each family cook serves her traditional Christmas feast, a few of these dinners will have unhappy endings.

Holidays are traditionally accompanied by increases in the number of reported cases of food poisonings, reports a food specialist.

Large meals, extra people, little space for adequate refrigeration, and carelessness provide favorable conditions for the growth of food poisoning bacteria, said L. B. Bullerman, assistant professor of food science and technology at the University of Nebraska.

Bullerman offered these precautions to help keep holiday meals safe:

Keep food either really hot or very cold. Do not allow food to stand at room temperature.

Do not allow cooked food to come in contact with uncooked food or with surfaces that may have been contaminated by uncooked food.

Refrigerate all cream pies, custards and cream filled pastries. Also refrigerate all left-overs as soon as possible after a meal.

Be sure your hands are clean and free of any infection before handling foods.

'Arms Sale Necessary'

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Weapons sold to South Africa by Britain would not be used as instruments against African nations but rather to protect trade lines which are vital to Britain, former prime minister John Deifenbaker said.

Deifenbaker said in an interview that smaller African nations are not able to protect the trade route against communism and they should not prevent Britain from protecting such lines.

Air Patrols Climb

EDMONTON (CP) — A system of highway traffic surveillance by plane will be expanded next year with a base in Calgary as well as Edmonton, an RCMP spokesman said Sunday night.

Sgt. G. E. Telzloff, an aircraft co-ordinator, said in an interview that in 1970 police planes flew in a 50-mile radius of Edmonton "with extended patrols into the Calgary area about once every two weeks during the summer."

Temperatures Plunge To New Lows

By The Canadian Press

Temperatures reached record lows for Dec. 20 in at least eight communities in frozen Alberta and Saskatchewan Sunday night, dropping to 40 below at Peace River.

The previous record for Dec. 20 at Peace River was 33 below, set in 1960.

Other Alberta records for the date were set at Vermillion, 36 below compared with 33 below in 1949, Coronation, 31 below compared with 27 in 1964, and Red Deer, 29 below compared with 28 in 1964.

In Saskatchewan, Yorkton was 34 below compared with 32 in 1963, North Battleford 34 below—30 in 1916 and 1962—Estevan 33 below—20 in 1949 and 1951—and Broadiew 35 below—30 in 1961.

The police tagged more than 7,000 motorists in Alberta between May and November for traffic infractions spotted from the air.

Leadership Date Set

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Progressive Conservative party will hold a leadership convention Feb. 19-20 in Winnipeg to chose a successor to Walter Weir, who announced his intention to resign Friday.

Graeme Haig, party president, said the date was set by a party executive meeting Saturday.

Weir's much-speculated resignation followed adoption of a resolution at the party's annual meeting last month asking for a leadership convention within a year.

WEST COAST SEARCH FOR 'NEOPHYTE TOO'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sea adventurer Lee Quinn and his crew of three women were still missing at sea Sunday, nearly five weeks after they were due here on a cross-Pacific yacht voyage, the United Statest Coast Guard said.

A spokesman said no merchant ship has reported seeing the 48-foor Neophyte Too and that an aerial search along the West Coast is planned.

Club of Broken Bones Has Another Member

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Well! I've finally made the grade! I've joined that great number of Victorians who, at one time or another, slip, slide, trip or fall and in so doing, end up with a few broken bones.

Forbes

Yes! That's me! I've got a cast on my left arm from shoulder to fingers. And I'm certain it weighs a ton!

How did it happen? Last Wednesday night I went to a Christmas party arranged by a club in which I'm an honor member.

It was held in a well-known gathering place where the caretaker's zeal had produced for the occasion, a spit and polish finish to the floor in the main hall.

I took one step into that hall and made the rest of my entrance flat on my back.

Speedy . . . certainly! Undignified . . . yes! But guaranteed to draw attention!

In the resulting action I banged my elbow hard on that shiny floor. I saw stars as my funny-bone reacted in typical funny-bone way. And I ended up with a cracked something or other near that funny bone. Result — this frustrating cast !!!!

It's only those who have experienced this kind of happening who will understand that when I use the word "frustrating" I certainly mean it.

Just try and unscrew the top of a toothpaste tube with one hand. Try to put on your stockings with one hand. Try to open a can of soup or button a coat.

What is even worse — and to a woman perhaps the ultimate in frustration — try and struggle into a foundation garment.

I'm told I must endure all these things and many more for two weeks at least. Maybe longer.

Let me warn you now — by the end of that time I'll likely be extremely bad tempered and spitting appropriate swear words!!!?x!

In lighter vein let me tell you that when I was down in Ottawa recently I was invited to the famed Men's Press Club for drinks and dinner.

You will remember the pressure play by Ottawa Women's Press Club earlier this year, to gain entrance to the men's stronghold on Wellington Street, opposite Parliament Hill.

At first the men voted "no." Then in a second ballot a few weeks later, reversed that decision and declared the women eligible to enter the doors of the clubrooms.

I was there for a monthly dinner meeting of the Women's Press Club. A few men were in the L-shaped lounge and at the bar. But I guessed for that evening at least the club had pretty well been turned over to the news hens.

Amongst old friends at the dinner meeting was Alice Carter, a British Columbia woman who once lived at Salmon Arm and wrote for Vancouver newspapers from there. She was also an early member of the Board of Broadcast Governors.

Now with her family "scattered in several places in the world" she has transferred her writing to the national capital and presently is with the women's department of the Ottawa Journal.

However, she says "I still turn my eyes westward on occasions — and some day, when I do retire — I will likely come home."

B.C. ROUNDUP

'Enforcing 12-Mile Limit No Problem'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Protecting British Columbia's proposed new fishing sanctuaries in Queen Charlotte Sound and Dixon Entrance won't pose any problems for the fisheries department, Pacific area director Rod Hourston said.

The department's patrols have up to now concentrated on policing the 12-mile offshore limit. As of March 1, according to new federal legislation proposed Friday by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, they will cover the inland sea enclosed by a line stretching from the southern tip of Alaska through the Queen Charlotte Islands to the northern tip of Vancouver Island.

Any hard work will be in the beginning, Hourston said, when the new limits will have to be established.

He said the fisheries fleet has 45 vessels, with a strong arm composed of the 180-foot Tanu loaded with electronic equipment, and two 120-foot vessels also electronically equipped and armed with 36-millimetre cannon.

Services Offered

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Robert Makaroff, sentenced to three months in jail and fined $15,000 in September for performing illegal abortions, has offered his medical services free of charge to the British Columbia health department in the field of therapeutic abortions.

In an open letter to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, Dr. Makaroff said he would donate his services to help cope with "escalating numbers of "therapeutic abortions."

Released Nov. 25, he is awaiting a decision from the council of College of Physicians and Surgeons of B.C. regarding possible suspension of his medical licence.

Club Patrons Robbed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three armed bandits forced their way into a city night club and robbed 12 patrons and staff of $2,700, including a diamond ring.

William Craig, owner of the August Club, said one of the bandits told him to "Open up, or I'll give it to you." The bandits then lined up all the male patrons and took their wallets and jewelry. Bar manager B. R. Howatt was robbed of a $1,600 ring.

U.S. to Bring Home 12,000 Japan Troops

TOKYO (Reuter) — The United States announced today the withdrawal of about 12,000 troops from Japan, along with virtually all American combat aircraft.

Following a top-level U.S.-Japan meeting here, a communique also said that a number of U.S. bases would be closed or shared with Japanese forces.

By the time the withdrawal is completed by mid-1971, the U.S. will have only 28,000 military personnel in Japan, none of them engaged in combat duties.

The majority of the U.S. Air Force Phantom jet fighter-bombers are being switched to South Korea and to the U.S.-held island of Okinawa, scheduled to be returned to Japan in 1972.

Official U.S. sources said the cut was being made in line with a need for reducing military expenditure, as well as shifting the greater burden for Japanese defence on to the Japanese military.

The cut, involving about one-third of the 35,000 to 40,000 American military personnel in Japan, marks the end of months of hard negotiations.

FOR SELF-HELP

They are in line with the Nixon doctrine of military self-help, under which the U.S. removes American combat units from the Asian mainland and encourages Asian countries to do more to defend themselves, while the U.S. maintains a nuclear umbrella over the area.

Japan already handles almost all its own defence, with American involvement virtually limited to the nuclear deterrent under a U.S.-Japan security treaty.

There are at present seven U.S. Phantom squadrons based in Japan, each containing 18 to 24 aircraft.

The reduction will result in the discharge of about 10,000 Japanese employees at U.S. bases by the end of June.

At the same time about 5,000 U.S. military and civilian personnel are being withdrawn from Okinawa.

The only combat aircraft remaining in Japan will be marine Phantoms at Iwakuni, in southern Japan, which will continue their role of supporting marine amphibious forces.

The 7th fleet will remain based in Japan, but its present two major repair bases will be cut to one.

Yokusuka, near Tokyo, is being handed over to the Japanese, and 7th fleet activities will be grouped at Sasebo, in southern Japan.

Two air squadrons, which will be moved to South Korea by June 30, are part of an American attempt to soften the impact of the planned withdrawal of up to 20,000 ground troops from South Korea.

No Gratitude To Warden

WASHINGTON, Pa. (AP) — Washington County Jail Warden Joseph A. Feconda passed out the annual supply of free Christmas cards this week for prisoners to send to friends and families.

But back through the prison mailing system Thursday came one addressed to the public defender. Inside was penned this note:

"The story of Christmas is a wonderful tale,

But please get out of this confounded jail."

CABBIES LOOK TO CITY AS N.Y. STRIKE ENDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Taxis rolled on the city's streets again today with the drivers anxious for the city council to act on a proposed fare increase that would pay for the higher wages they won in a 15-day strike.

Some 4,500 of the 36,000 striking drivers voted three to two at a meeting Sunday to end their walkout against taxi fleet owners and the familiar yellow cabs began appearing shortly thereafter.

Terms of the pact were not disclosed but sources reported that the settlement involved a compromise that would reduce the commission share for new drivers while increasing fringe benefits for career cabbies.

Although the taxi fleet owners agreed to help pay for the added benefits, the money for the package including higher wages must come from a fare increase, which only the city council can authorize.

The drivers walked out Dec. 5 in an attempt to win a wage increase from the current $150 a week to parity with the $174 to $200 earned by city transit employees. Nearly 12,000 cabs that carry 800,000 daily riders were made idle.

Harry Van Arsdale, president of Local 3036 of the Taxi Drivers Union, said the new pact would bring them close to the level they sought.

Poolwinner Won't Spend

LONDON (Reuter) — A British housewife who won $813,000 on a football pool last weeks says she is afraid to spend the money.

Known to the world only as Mrs. X because she wants no publicity, she said she and her husband had talked a lot about the money but so far all they bought with it was a few clothes and a car.

Their sudden wealth has brought fear to the couple that their children might be kidnapped if word got out that they had the money.

"We like the way we live and all our friends and the town here," Mrs. X told a reporter who promised not to reveal her name.

Two West German kidnappers were arrested Saturday at Erlangen at a second scheduled meeting with their victim's parents. The meeting was a second one because Reinhold Diechert,18, and his brother Walter, 20, slept in past the time they were to meet Rainer Basel to exchange his daughter for a ransom of $27,000. Police arrested the pair at the second meeting.

A 16-year-old girl was scheduled to testify today in a Boston federal court hearing for a teacher who was fired for allegedly writing the verb describing the act of sexual intercourse on his classroom blackboard.

Cook says some children want to know what Santa Claus is doing driving a taxi. "I tell them my sled broke down," he says. "Some of them look at me like they think I'm a fool."

Roger A. Mailloux, a teacher at Lawrence High School, said he wrote the word Oct. 1 during a class discussion of Jesse Stuart's book "The Thread That Runs So True" and is asking for reinstatement and $50,000 in damages.

"I did it to show that there are acceptable words and there are dirty words that have the same meaning but society doesn't allow the dirty word," Mailloux testified.

School committee lawyers claim Mailloux asked Anne Therrier, 16, to define the word after he wrote it on the blackboard.

GRAHAM
. . . America in trouble

Evangelist Billy Graham says America is losing the "vision and hope" that guided its Pilgrim fathers and that only a recommitment to their ideals can save the country from ruin. Graham made the statement in an address marking the 350th anniversary of the arrival of the Mayflower at Plymouth, Mass.

A Formosa fisherman has been indicted for manslaughter in the bizarre deaths of 22 of his shipmates off the coast of Brazil in September.

Controversial Play Probes Forces Behind FLQ Crisis

VANCOUVER (CP) — A controversy has broken out in the Playhouse Theatre company over a play described as an "abstract look" at the forces behind the FLQ crisis in Quebec.

The Playhouse board of directors has deferred indefinitely a scheduled February production of the play, Captives of the Faceless Drummer, written by George Ryga.

Mr. Ryga greeted the deferral with charges that the board is exercising censorship and intimidation.

Playhouse artistic director David Gardner said in an interview that the deferral decision was unanimous.

"The subject matter is obviously controversial and there is a difference of opinion over the artistic merit of the play," he said.

"The board is worried about the play's effect at this particular time."

Mr. Ryga, who was commissioned by the Playhouse to write the play, said his main complaint is that the board of directors, with not one professional artist on it, has the power to schedule plays.

"Power that should reside with the artistic director has come into the hands of the board of directors," he said.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

Derek Rhind Injured In Crash

DUNCAN — Derek Rhind, editor of the Cowichan Leader, is reported in good condition in Cowichan Hospital after being involved in a head-on collision Saturday evening.

Rhind, 45, of Maple Bay, is recovering from a fractured shoulder, broken wrist and broken foot, while his newly-purchased 1971 Volkswagen, which had 50 miles on it, is a complete write-off.

RCMP said Rhind's vehicle was squashed between a second car, owned by Douglas Jim Joseph of Duncan, and the side of the Silver Bridge entering Duncan.

Driver of the second vehicle is still unidentified.

Passenger in the Rhind vehicle, Joca Dikkenman, suffered minor injuries.

Prowling Trial Adjourned To Jan. 18

DUNCAN — The trial of Peter Clugston, 31, on a charge of prowling, was adjourned Friday to Jan. 18 to allow Judge Stanley Wardill time to assess information given him by defence lawyer Lloyd G. McKenzie and prosecutor Jack Davie.

Clugston, district director for the department of rehabilitation and social improvement, has pleaded not guilty to the Sept. 18 charge. He is free on his own recognizance.

Clugston testified he was kicking a football around outside his yard at 9:30 p.m. when he lost it. He said he thought it went into Denis Bundy's yard at 350 Dogwood.

BACK OF HOUSE

He said he checked the Bundy carport and then went around to the back of the house, where he tripped and fell into a laurel bush and lay stunned for a few minutes until he heard voices and people around.

At the time Clugston was looking in the carport, Leslie Painter and his wife, who live at 341 Dogwood, phoned Judy Bundy, 20, and told her they saw a man looking into her bedroom window.

A few days later, Clugston's football was found in an adjoining yard to Bundy's.

FOOTBALL FAN

Neighbors to Clugston testified that they have often seen Clugston, an enthusiastic football fan, kick the football around, and that because of the well-lit street it is possible at night.

Clugston told court he often does this for the exercise because he has a desk job.

Several neighbors, including Rev. Neil Robinson, and Clugston's co-workers, testified on his behalf.

The charge was laid by Duncan RCMP.

Air, Sea Both Used By S. Claus

Santa Claus arrived twice in Sidney Saturday.

The first time, he greeted by more than 400 youngsters at Sanscha Hall where he descended in a helicopter.

A parade followed down Beacon Avenue including red-coated RCMP, a fire engine, two beauty queens — Corinne Eckert, Miss Mermaid, and Molly Daniels, Miss Tsartlip — the Sidney Kinsmen air cadet band and a majorette group.

Children received a bag of candy, balloons and toys and a chance to speak to Santa at the Gem Theatre. The affair was sponsored by the Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce.

Later in the day, Cubs and Brownies attended their annual Christmas party at Sanscha Hall.

Santa arrived again — this time on the Santa Ship manned by Bellingham Jaycees on their annual Christmas cruise to communities in the San Juan and Gulf Islands. Two hundred youngsters lined up on the wharf to receive treats from Santa.

Prof Studies Students' Gambling

TORONTO (CP) — Prof. Igor Kusyszyn's gambling students have graduated in the chips.

The York University professor has conducted an evening course on gambling for the last four months. When he took 10 of his 12 students to the racetrack on a field trip recently, all who placed bets won money. One man made $240, the professor won more than $200 himself and total winnings were more than $700.

"I think this course has made us really realize the importance of self-discipline in successful gambling," one student, who plays blackjack exclusively, said as the course ended last week.

The students were all men, the majority middle-aged.

One, a semi-pro with a background in statistics, had practically earned his living from gaming tables for more than 20 years and came to the seminar to find out "my psychological and financial reaction to losing."

Another, a high school teacher, came to learn how to handicap horse races.

Mail On Hand Out By Yule

Victoria post office today promised all mail now on hand will be delivered locally by Christmas.

To the end of last week mailmen here had handled 13.8 million pieces in the Chirtmas rush period, about the same volume as a year ago, the peak day accounting for 631,594 letters and parcels.

There were no figures on parcel postings, but first class mail handled here rose about 9 per cent, while third class — the unsealed Christmas cards — dropped off 11.8 per cent from 1969.

Metered business main also rose, by 4 per cent.

Columnist Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Edward Joseph Mowery, 64, a newspaper man and syndicated columnist who won the Pulitzer Prize for local reporting in 1953, has died. Mowery won the journalism prize while a reporter for the New York World-Telegram and Sun. During a period of five years he wrote over 70 stories that finally resulted in clearing Louis Hoffner, a penniless Brooklyn clerk who was serving a life sentence for a barroom payroll holdup he never committed.

$10,000 To Nemetz

The provincial cabinet has approved payment of $10,000 in fees to cover costs of the summer inquiry of Mr. Justice Nathan Nemetz of the B.C. Court of Appeals into the coast forest industry labor dispute.

The fees cover expenses for technical and legal work. Mr. Justice Nemetz received no remuneration for his work.

Second Generation Blacks in Britain Bent on Chances

By JULIET FLINT

LONDON (AP) — A new Black Panther party is raising a dissident head in Britain. Police expect a crunch from second-generation non-white immigrants who want action against poverty and prejudice in contrast to the "passive fatalism" often ascribed to their parents.

The Black Panthers are hell-bent on revolution, one of their followers says, in the conviction that power cedes nothing without demand. But revolution, they say, takes time.

★ ★ ★

Many of the immigrants are blacks of West Indian ancestry. The Panthers have attracted other non-whites, including Asians.

"We see ourselves less as Africans or Indians in English society, and more as blacks in a white society," said one Panther, saying he speaks for Asian members as well as blacks.

The movement has begun to organize nationally and is linked to other militant groups in the Black People's Alliance. Foremost among these are the Black Unity and Freedom party, a youth-oriented Marxist group, and the Black Eagles, a grass-roots "commando" group.

The Panthers draw their strongest support from Notting Hill and Brixton, Hackney and New Cross where large immigrant populations complicate already severe social problems.

Police deny racial tension is increasing significantly in these areas. But a Panther news sheet says the situation has been "charged with explosion" since Aug. 9, when 14 Panthers were arrested and charged with riotous assembly.

Police admit isolated instances of harassment, but deny any concerted campaign is afoot to wipe out Panther leadership.

★ ★ ★

Immigrants are deeply concerned by the hostility of many non-white youths toward their parents.

"We are fighting a losing battle," says West Indian journalist Vince Hines. "We're telling the kids, no time for hate, but at the same time the environment is working against us."

Panthers argue that attention to individual problems in no way alleviates the sufferings of the mass of black people. Their program focuses on cultural and political education, to spotlight grievances and build a sense of community as a prelude to revolution.

Cold Frame Unit Can Be Useful

By HILDA BEASTALL

Cold frames must not be neglected by the gardener during these busy days. Rain has been heavy at times, and glass covers needed for keeping out excessive moisture, yet with temperatures mainly mild the covers must be raised all around to permit ventilation.

This combination of requirements led to casualties among glass frame covers last week while the tremendous gusts of wind were sweeping over Victoria and vicinity.

Hilda

Gardeners, wise in experience of coastal weather, keep handy enough pieces of heavy lumber to lay across their frame covers. When the covers are fully closed, there is not the same problem of moving air masses getting underneath the glass and causing shifting.

Two heavy pieces of planking resting on the wood edges of the frames, not on the glass, will take care of a three-by-six glass cover in our strongest gales.

It is when the frame covers are raised for ventilation that more care must be used in the form of heavier weights.

To prop open the covers equally all around, use either half bricks or short blocks of two-by-fours set on the runner bars at each of the four corners of each frame section.

The air circulation will then be equal in the frame, without draughts, and without dead air spaces. The object is to keep the air moving, thus preventing all kinds of fungus troubles developing on whatever plants are being given the shelter of the frames.

The circulation also prevents the buildup of heat when the sun shines. We don't want young growths to start on the plants; we want them to be almost dormant, but unharmed by excessive wet, unnatural heat or freezing temperatures.

Chrysanthemum roots being stored in the frames for winter need as much air as possible. In fact, the covers should be off whenever sharp frosts are not imminent, yet heavy rains must be kept out. Sometimes the plants may even require a gentle watering to prevent the soil from becoming dust dry. If this is allowed, the growths appearing later in winter which we want to take as cuttings will be weak and unlikely to develop into strong plants.

Gardeners without cool basements or other suitable space for storing garden plants should decide to construct, or buy already cut to size, a cold frame unit.

You will find uses for it throughout the year, and will wonder why you resisted the idea for so many years.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

Today's deal, which arose in the World Championships of 1970, features an excellent bit of defense by Elmer Hsiao, of the Chinese team. He was sittingin the East seat. South was Robert Wolfe, of the U.S. team.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Four of ♡.

East's opening bid of one diamond was artificial. East-West were not opening four-card major suits, and an opening bid of one club would have guaranteed at least 16 high-card points. Thus he had no choice but to open one diamond.

South's three no-trump overcall was a good gamble, although on this given day it did not bring in a profit. On West's opening lead of the four of hearts, declarer made a natural misguess when he put up dummy's jack—East, the opening bidder, figured to have the ace of hearts.

When East won the trick with his queen, it was rather obvious that West held the heart ace. East also realized that South had just about everything else in the way of high cards, since South surely wasn't fooling around when he made his vulnerable leap to three no-trump.

From East's point of view, South certainly had the A-Q of spades, the guarded diamond queen, and six or seven solid clubs. So East correctly chose to adopt a passive defense by making a safe lead of a club into South's strength.

It should be noted that if East had returned a heart, dummy's king would have become a winner; if, instead, he cashed the ace and king of diamonds, South's queen would have become a winner. And if he elected to play back a spade, South would have let it ride around to dummy's jack, after which a successful finesse of South's spade queen would have given declarer three spade tricks. Thus, by elimination, Hsiao came up with the excellent defense of attacking South's presumed solid suit in order to avoid giving him any help in the other suits.

Declarer won East's club return at trick two with his ace, after which he cashed the club king. With the outstanding clubs falling, South was now able to enter dummy via the club nine.

The jack of spades was next laid down, covered by East's king, and taken by South's ace. Declarer then ran the rest of his clubs, but when play had ended, all he come to were eight tricks: two spades and six clubs.

Fun with Figures

Judy didn't have a chance when Uncle Bob threw those pennies on to the rug. "It isn't fair," she cried. "Doug got four times what I did."

Doug grinned. "Well, Steve got half again as much as me."

"It's my own fault," Bob told the three children. "Now let's see you split it all three ways to be fair. That's 33 cents for each of you."

How much had Doug taken?

Donation Keeps Centre

A $1,000 donation from a newcomer to Victoria will enable Environment 100 to continue its work of accumulating and cataloguing information on the environment until the end of February.

The anonymous donation came from a former Greenwich, Conn., resident, a mother of three, who said in a letter to Environment 100 she wants to help prevent the kind of environmental deterioration she saw in her former home town.

"Most people here are just not aware of what can happen in such a short period. They can't really believe that what we say can happen, but the same sort of thing could happen here," she wrote.

Environment 100 was set up earlier this year to begin the work of providing unbiased information on the environment for Greater Victoria residents.

Organizers hope to open an environmental information centre next year. It would help people find information they seek, provide a pool of experts and speakers and organize the barrage of literature on ecological problems.

Hughes' Nevada Aide Ousted

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Robert A. Maheu, ousted as head of Howard Hughes' $300 million Nevada empire after a bitter court fight, is considering whether to take further legal action, his lawyer says.

Morton Galane, who conferred with Maheu Sunday, said no decision has yet been reached on whether to continue the battle against Hughes Tool Co. directors who fired Maheu Dec. 4 but had to go to court to make it stick.

Maheu, 53, a former FBI agent, had run Hughes' Nevada operations since 1966 under what he says was a personal agreement with the billionaire.

His refusal to accept dismissal touched off a two-week court battle that ended Saturday when Judge Howard Babcock of the U.S. district court ruled in favor of the tool company directors.

The judge held that Hughes—variously reported in the Bahamas and in Los Angeles—had given the directors power to fire Maheu, and dismissed a temporary restraining order Maheu had obtained against them.

He also granted the tool company a permanent injunction forbidding Maheu from interfering with tool company control of all Hughes' Nevada properties, which include seven casinos, five hotels and 2,600 mining claims. Hughes is the state's largest employer, with a payroll of 8,000 persons.

Pupils Take Family A Yule Wonderland

Student activism doesn't always mean demonstrations, liberating the dean's confidential files and burning the administration building.

Witness the mobilization of the student body at Gordon Head Elementary.

An ad hoc steering committee of seven pupils began with a plan stressing involvement and activism that would help make Christmas happier all around by making it happier for one Greater Victoria family.

The activist line was so persuasive that the entire school, including teachers, jumped on the bandwagon.

With a family assigned by the Christmas Bureau the steering committee began collecting funds and toys from 500 fellow students and teachers.

In a scant week-and-a-half they raised $144 cash and "a whole pile of toys for presents."

Monday morning, with a collective pocketful of dough and teacher Don Johannesson doing chauffeur duties, the Gordon Head Seven set off on a shopping spree.

The store which would stock the food hampers had been carefully selected — "They give us a discount, that's why we're going there."

Toys collected from the student body which ranges from Grade 1 to 7 were culled and only those in the best condition were to go into the hampers.

Surplus toys in good condition are to go to the Goodwill Store.

Although the collection was a joint effort by students and faculty, the seven who made it work were: Sandra Priestly, Debra Parker, Debra Hanley, Cindy Hall, Harold Wilson, John Deboer and Randy Maxwell.

Poland Ousts Party Leader

Food Rioting Forces Purge

Times News Service

WARSAW — Five top members of the Polish government, including leader Wladyslaw Gomulka, have been purged in the wake of widespread riots against a government-ordered boost in food prices.

Calm began to return today to the rebellious cities with the appointment of Edward Gierek as leader of the nation's Communist party.

He immediately began talks to try to straighten out the country's economy.

Gierek has called for a re-appraisal "of the ill-considered economic policies" which set off the bloody rioting last week.

Gierek used the phrase "ill-considred" in a speech to a plenary session of the party's central committee Sunday which forced Gomulka to resign after 14 years as party secretary.

The central committee also fired four members of the 12-man ruling politburo, including President Marian Spychalski, who remains, however, as head of state.

Among those dismissed was Boleslaw Jaszczuk, 57, responsible for carrying out economic reforms aimed at modernizing Poland's stagnant economy through a transition to more selective, intensive development of key industries.

Jaszczuk, a former ambassador to Russia, was regarded as the main advocate of sharp pre-Christmas food price increases a week ago, which ignited smouldering resentment over other aspects of the reforms and led to strikes and street clashes in Baltic coastal towns.

Warsaw radio said workers in riot-torn Gdansk and Gdynia had returned to work today but did not mention Szczecin, hit hardest by the disorders. Telephone lines to Gdansk remained down and its airport closed to regular traffic a week after the riots began there.

GIVES PARTY LINE

Troops were believed still occupying Szczecin, and a source reported from Gdansk that tanks were on the streets and a nighttime curfew remained in force. Damage at Gdansk alone was estimated at $3.5 million.

In a radio and television address after his election as new party first secretary, Gierek, a 57-year-old former miner, said the party would give a difficult and self-critical but clear and true answer to the question of how this disaster happened.

Some causes were the result of real difficulties but others were due to "ill-considered conceptions of economic policy" which would have to be removed, he said in what appeared to be an obvious criticism of Jaszczuk.

The burly, crew-cut new

Agnew to Step Down If Better Man Shows

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew says he is willing to step down in 1972 if a vice-presidential candidate comes along with more political appeal, but that President Nixon "gives me every indication that he approves of the courses of action that I have taken."

Agnew made the statement in a copyrighted story by Akron Beacon Jornal writers who talked to him Friday in Akron.

"I'm not an insecure man. I don't worry from day to day whether the president is looking at me with a fishy eye."

Clean Air Program Proposed

A province-wide air pollution study commissioned by the provincial government has called for a broad prevention and control program to keep air pollution problems from reaching their "high potential."

Key recommendation appears to be that the attack on air pollution be carried out initially at the provincial level, with regions and municipalities given a share of responsibility later.

MORE RESEARCH

Establishment of air quality standards, a big increase in research, including a province-wide monitoring program, and an effort to find alternatives to burning of municipal and industrial refuse are among the recommendations.

The study, carried out by the B.C. Research Council, was presented to the government last week and is currently under study.

It was commissioned last Jan. 15.

"Air pollution problems do exist in the province of British Columbia and, more importantly, there is high potential for additional pollution problems," the report said.

"The majority of present problems are localized in area and of limited duration and severity; however, continued and rapid growth of some areas in the absence of adequate control measures will create more intense community and regional problems."

HAVE A CHOICE

The report says the provincial government policy faces a choice between an immediate moderate-cost and largely preventive program of costly "more drastic corrective action" in a generation or two when "a more serious and generalized air pollution situation develops."

Lack of information in a number of study areas, including pulp mill air pollution, was cited as a major difficulty in conducting the study.

A central information centre for air pollution is recommended.

LESSER PROBLEM

Not surprisingly, the study concluded that Victoria presents a lesser pollution problem than Vancouver, the other metropolitan area in the province, because of lesser industrial activity and higher prevailing winds.

Vancouver has "an air pollution problem similar to that of San Francisco and Los Angeles but not nearly as severe or continuous throughout the year."

Small cities in a valley location with one or more large industries will have to battle both the large sources of air pollution—frequently "obnoxious odors, soiling corrosive chemical fall-out and reduced visibility"—and also the non-industrial sources because atmospheric inversion in such locations can trap all pollutants and create a problem despite limited population.

The report says that most of the area of the province has virtually no man-made pollution. Forest fires, emission of hydrocarbons from vegetation and wind erosion

Tucson Hotel Fire Kills 28; Youth Held

TUCSON, Ariz. (CP) — Juvenile court petitions alleging felony homicide and arson were filed today against a 16-year-old youth in a $2.5-million fire which killed 28 persons and injured 27 in a downtown hotel Sunday.

The youth was taken into custody near the scene of the blaze, and questioned by police.

The petition identified him as Louis C. Taylor, four-time parolee from the State Industrial School for Boys.

Ben Birdsall, Pima County Superior Court juvenile judge, said Taylor "told us a number of different stories about the fire.

"He said he was at the scene and saw the fire start, but claims he saw another boy do it."

Several survivors of the flames which raced through the upper half of the 12-storey Pioneer International Hotel said they had smelled a volatile substance in the corridors.

The fire in the 41-year-old building broke out on the sixth floor and flared through hallways and staircases, penning about 60 persons in their rooms with no way out except through the windows.

One woman plunged to her death from the seventh floor.

"I'm still here—I'm still here!" witnesses said she shouted shortly before making the fatal leap.

MOSTLY MEXICANS

The dead in the dawn blaze were mostly wealthy Mexicans and their families who came to Tucson for Christmas shopping.

They were all from Sonora which lies across the border from Arizona 65 miles south of here.

They included the wife and five children of Maj. Francisco Luken, chief of Sonora's state judicial police.

Also killed was Dr. Jose Jesus Antillon, one of Mexico's most prominent cardiologists, his wife and their three children.

Five grandchildren of the former governor of Sonora, Ignacio Soto, died in the fire. Their parents survived.

Harold Steinfeld, 82, builder of the hotel and owner of a department store, died with his wife in their penthouse apartment.

Many of the survivors said they awoke with smoke pouring into their rooms.

WINNING struggle for life is six-year-old Karyn Prestwich, of North Forks, Idaho, who was mistaken for a deer by a hunter Nov. 6 and shot in the stomach. Karyn will be able to enjoy Christmas with her family. See story on Page 2.

Davis Enters Race For Robarts' Post

Times News Services

TORONTO — Education Minister William Davis, 41, today declared his candidacy for the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party and immediately became the favorite to succeed Premier John Robarts.

Robarts earlier announced he will resign at a convention Feb. 10-12.

A powerful, 50-man committee headed by Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton as campaign manager will support Davis.

The number of legislature members who have already declared openly for Mr. Davis indicates the 11-year veteran of the legislature will be the foremost candidate in the leadership race.

A pleasant-spoken, witty lawyer and former assistant Crown attorney for Peel County, just west of Toronto, Davis has seemed out out for the premiership since he was first elected in 1959.

He was the youngest member of the legislature—at 30—when he won Peel South for the first time. The riding contains his home and birthplace, Brampton.

Davis became education minister in 1962 and in 1964 was given a second and related portfolio as minister of university affairs.

LAPORTE INQUEST AGAIN POSTPONED

MONTREAL (CP) — An inquest into the death of kidnap victim Pierre Laporte was postponed for the second time today without any witnesses being called.

Crown Prosecutor Yves Fortier requested the postponement to Monday, Jan. 4, for the same reason advanced Dec. 1. Prosecutor Jacques Ducros said then that testimony of witnesses might interfere with the work of police.

TORONTO COUPLE WIN SUPER IRISH PRIZE

$486,000 Christmas Gift!

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto couple got the biggest Christmas present of their lives today—$486,000.

Bob and Bessie Jacobs were awakened at 4 a.m. today by a telephone call from Ireland telling them they had won £20,000 as a super prize in the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes.

The prize was for the first ticket drawn out of the sweeps drum. The sweeps jackpot normally is $120,500 for a ticket on the winning horse, but for this race—the Sweeps Hurdles scheduled Dec. 28—a super prize was added.

The super prize will remain a feature of all Irish Sweepstake draws in the future. The new departure is in observance of the 40th anniversary of the draw.

BESSIE JACOBS

The official results of the draw have not yet been released by hospital officials in Ireland, but the Jacobs got the good news by telephone.

Jacobs is a $190-a-week printer and both were numb with shock after receiving the news.

"I can't believe it," said Mrs. Jacobs. "I just can't believe it."

The winning ticket was in her name.

Jacobs said he did not know if he would leave his job.

"We just want to live a normal life," he said.

Mrs. Jacobs, who said she has been buying lottery and sweeps tickets for the last 20 years, was too

VICTORIA, B.C., MONDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1970 —PAGE 21

TRUST NOBODY

That's a Jungle Yonder, Dearie

By Jack Scott

Somewhere in our town today there's a lonely widow in her late fifties or early sixties, a woman with a nice little financial nest-egg or maybe a nice big one, who had better plan right now on making a firm and fast New Year's resolution.

It would go more or less like this: "I will trust no one, I will be suspicious of every man, however nice or honest a face he may have, until I am convinced of his integrity—and even then I will be suspicious as all hell. Above all, I will sign nothing in 1971."

It's too late now for the dear old thing who signed up for $5,000 in lessons on how to do the tango and samba, or the nice trusting girl who was promised the 30 per cent return in that certain mutual fund and saw every last dime disappear, or the charming old thing who believed it when the man volunteered to fix her chimney for $30 and somehow the bill ballooned to $3,000.

Scott

The lonely Victoria widow who has yet to be had — and won't be, hopefully, if she hews to her new year's resolution — will be taking the advice of a man who, every working day of his life, is reminded of the terrible vulnerability of our town's older folks as the prey of petty larcenists, franchised pirates, hard-sell gimmick artists, soft-sell con men and assorted other fast-buck bandits.

As manager of Vancouver Island's Better Business Bureau since its inception eight years ago, W. D. "Bill" Tindall, a handsome, silvering, 49-year-old man trying hard to hold on to his illusions, has seen first hand the tragedy that's wrought by the corrupting two per cent of the population that's dedicated to fleecing the remaining 98 per per cent. It's a tragedy particularly heart-breaking when the victims are ancient.

"We're unique in this because we're a retirement city, a Mecca for the old who have the money to come here and those who follow them to relieve them of it," Tindall sighs. "In today's society it is the older person who is the most trusting, the most-swindle-prone. Statistically the widows outnumber the men — women, usually, without practical experience in handling money — and they're the most susceptible of all."

★ ★ ★

In terms of sheer money volume the bulk of the loot goes to what Tindall describes as "the self-styled business advisor or counsellor." The good name of reputable investment companies and the policing of the superintendent of securities are meaningless when the lone operator may freely identify himself as "an investment broker," promise a return of anything from 18 to 30 per cent and let the covetous nature of man take its course.

Item: A Victorian hands over $8,000, as first mortgage money, paying 12 per cent, collectable monthly, to a man who describes himself as "a realtor." He decides, too late, to have a title search on the property. He is fifth in line in the list of suckers who hold first mortgages. Unexpectedly, the property is sold to wind up an estate. Only two of the victims recover their money. The "realtor" has disappeared.

"The frightening thing," says Bill Tindall, "is that for every such case that surfaces there are anywhere from 15 to 20 that don't. Older people, particularly, have too much pride to admit to an act of stupidity. For that reason, all we see of the swindles is the tip of the iceberg and, God knows, the tip is impressive enough."

Less in the big money category, but equally insidious, is the gimmick of dance studios and social clubs that appeal directly to the lonely widow.

Tindall: "There is the handsome male instructor, just as you'd expect, telling the poor dear what talent she has, how wonderful she's doing in the introductory lesson, and before they know it, they've signed on the dotted line for as many as four overlapping contracts to the extent of $3,000 or more. The record — that we know of! — is a woman nearly 60 years of age who found herself with $5,000 in lessons on a signed, unbreakable contract."

In the Bureau's files at this red hot moment is the case of a woman who paid $2,200 in advance for 180 weeks of lessons. When she failed to receive a receipt for her money she went to the manager. For bookkeeping purposes, said he, the money was in a separate account. But if she would give him a further $2,800 he would give her a promissory note for $5,500, repayable in three months at eight per cent interest. Incredibly, she did. The note was written on the ornate letterhead of a company that doesn't exist. It didn't matter. The lad was long gone once the cheque was cashed.

★ ★ ★

Then there are the social clubs, the lonely-heart gathering places where the two-dollar registration fee may suddenly get to be a signed-up $240, three out of four of the other lonely hearts are also hopeful widows and the net result of the investment is to be exposed, at their own expense, to the predators. (One such club, with a $20 registration fee, guarantees a date with a compatible, eligible bachelor and they fulfill the contract, too, except, it seems, that it's the same, tired bachelor who handles them all.)

Ah, but you needn't go out to be taken. Just wait right there at home. They'll come to you.

"Each winter it's the same," Tindall explains with a trace of weariness. "The so-called home-improvement contractors leave the prairie ice and snow to come here and work a new territory, then drift back again when the summer comes. The pitch is always the same. The fellow has seen that your chimney could use a little work. Would you like him to look at it? He comes down with a handful of loose mortar, tells you it's dangerous, could be fixed for only $30. That begins it. He finds that the whole roof needs to be replaced, the downspouts are shot, the field tile has gone and quite sensible people find themselves with a $4,000 commitment that began at $30. The work, needed or not, is never done. If you can find him he'll tell you that he never said when he'd do it. But you rarely find him or the money that went with him."

Another dandy, also an elusive itinerant, is the man with the magic spray "sealing solution" to rid the roof of moss. Usual price: $75. Usual result: A lifetime mess of oil, tar and gasoline. One man with an old truck can handle a house per hour with five dollars worth of magic spray per house and retire to parts unknown with a handsome profit and the certainty that no one will catch up with him.

Bill Tindall will tell you that the city licence laws should be tightened up to squeeze out the incompetent and the known dishonest, but that's unlikely so long as licensing is more a revenue-producer than a protector.

Meanwhile, his advice, to young and old alike, is just this: "Love the human race and be on your guard at all times."

BECAUSE OF BUSINESS POSITIONS

Some Have More Votes Than Others

100 Victorians Hold Privilege

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

There is no ceiling on the number of votes a person may cast in a municipal election.

It is theoretically possible for 50 people to cast 1,000 ballots without breaking the law.

The only limitation is the number of corporations in which a man or woman is a prominent figure, and is chosen as the corporation's voter.

In other words, the more influential positions in business a man holds, the more votes he is likely to control.

This is borne out by the 1970-71 voters list for the municipality of Victoria, which contains more than 100 examples of people with two votes or more.

There are at least 100 electors with two votes, four with three votes, two with four votes and one man who can cast five ballots.

The man with the most votes in a Victoria election is G. J. Stewart, who lives in Oak Bay at 3145 Sheringham.

He is the designated voting agent for Associated Building Credits Ltd. Chemainus Properties Ltd., Hiview Investments Ltd., Stewart and Hudson Ltd., and Parkside Towers Ltd.

The two men with four votes each are H. B. Elworthy and G. I. Edgelow. Elworthy may vote as an owner-elector as well as agent for Island Tug and Barge, Princess Mary Restaurant, and the Imperial Inn.

Edgelow can vote as a tenant-elector and as agent for T. Admark Ltd., Current Events Publishing Ltd., and Farm News Ltd.

Eric Charman, 1632 Rockland, can vote as a resident from that address and once each for Charman Pacific Realty Ltd. and General Mortgage Corp. Ltd.

H. Lou Poy may vote as an owner-elector and as agent for Hook Sin Tong Charity, and Pioneer Fruit and Vegetable Co. Ltd.

K. King can vote as agent for these three companies: Maple Room Catering Service, Hotel Douglas Co. Ltd., and Pandora Enterprises.

G. B. Mackenzie, 1551 Rockland, can vote once as an owner-elector and once each for the Royal Bank of Canada and Globe Realty Corp. which is a wholly owned subsidiary of the bank.

Highway Claims Another

A 26-year-old Saanich woman became the ninth Patricia Bay Highway fatality in 14 months early Sunday morning.

Mrs. Winnifred Nimmo, of 3262 Shelley Street, was killed at about 1:50 a.m. when her small car left the highway and slammed into a power pole.

She was driving south on the Pat Bay in the region of Amity Drive when the accident occurred.

Mrs. Nimmo was at least the 17th person to die on the highway since 1964. Accurate statistics concerning road deaths on the Pat Bay Highway have never been compiled, says the Capital Region Safety Council, but Times files show a total of eight deaths in 1964 and nine in 1969-70.

Such statistics are available in the files of the three police departments which have jurisdiction over varying stretches of the highway but have never been compiled.

CRITICAL CONDITION

After another weekend accident, Ian Hawkes Frost, 62, of 1065 Burdett, was in critical condition today at St. Joseph's Hospital when the car he was driving collided with another at 4 p.m. Sunday at Wildwood and Ross.

His passenger, Maria Kolodensky, 48, of 1065 Burdett, was in good condition today with rib injuries.

Police said Frost was driving east on Ross when he collided with a car driven by Grant A. Mebs, 1320 Dallas. Mebs was not injured.

Too Much Legal Paperwork

W. C. Mearns, 3245 Beach Drive in Oak Bay, can vote in Victoria as a property owner and as agent for the British Columbia Electric Company which was taken over by the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority early in the 1960s.

Changing the titles over, says Victoria solicitor Terry O'Grady would involve a prohibitive amount of legal paperwork.

G. S. Wallace is included in the Victoria voting list as both tenant-elector and owner-elector with the address given as 1494 Fairfield.

Similarly, Robert W. Chard is listed as an owner-elector with the address given as 131-645 Fort, and as tenant elector, the given address being 645 Fort.

A man may not vote twice on the strength of two separately owned properties. In the Greater Victoria School District, however, there is no consolidated voting list. This means that on election day, an Oak Bay property owner could go to his Oak Bay polling station and cast votes for both Oak Bay Council and the school board, which this year began electing trustees at large from the four core municipalities.

The man might then proceed to a Victoria polling station to cast votes for Victoria aldermen on the strength of property ownership in that city or delegated voting authority from one or more corporations.

Along with the aldermanic ballots he would automatically receive another set of ballots for the school board.

There is no guard against this voting outside of a deterrent fine. The voter is expected to "declare" that he has already voted for the school board candidates.

The best and safest way to get lots of ballots into the ballot box, however, is to seek out men with several delegated voting rights.

If a man running for office in a large city wanted to campaign efficiently, he would spend his time persuading the most influential businessmen that he was a good choice. If found 50 men who were agents for 20 companies each, or 100 men who were agents for 10 companies each, he might attract a valuable 1,000 votes. In the recent municipal election, Candidate Alfred Hood needed only 15 more votes than he received to overtake Tom Christie and win an aldermanic seat.

If Hood had concentrated his campaign on 100 men who hold more than one vote in Victoria, he might have gone the distance.

Bunn Charge Wrong Counters City Engineer

City engineer Jim Garnett today accused school trustee Peter Bunn of making "erroneous" statements about government stupidity concerning sewer connections that increased costs at Burnside Elementary.

Bunn, chairman of the school board's building and grounds committee and a contractor himself, cited two examples of city bungling which he said cost ratepayers an extra $1,800 for sewer work.

Despite earlier approval by city engineers of sewer and storm drain connections, the plumbing inspector demanded a change in design and the subsequent increase in drain size cost an additional $800 for a distribution centre being built near Burnside Elementary.

He also charged the city told architects about a sewer that turned out to be non-existent and an extra sewer connection cost $400.

"His statements are quite erroneous," Garnett said.

"I think Mr. Bunn should do his homework before he makes such statements."

Garnett said a school board architect's error which neglected to take into consideration private property in the area led to a request that sewer pipe be laid at a different level to avoid excess excavation of rock.

To lay the pipe and still comply with regulations a new size of pipe was required.

He said the school board was "warned both verbally and in writing" of the possibility that another sewer connection might not exist. It was decided to go ahead on the chance that it might be there, and when it wasn't a standard connection was made.

Bunn originally said aimlessness and indecision by the province were also responsible for increases totalling more than $50,000 at Braefoot and Vic West schools.

"I'm sure that if I sat down and added them all up, the bill for stupidity in the past two years would be well over $100,000," Bunn said.

He said the school board, however, "really quite an efficient body of people, is being made to look silly by senior levels of government."

Meet Date On Arena Scheduled

A public meeting will be held in three weeks to set the course for an arena in Langford-Colwood.

The meeting will be held Monday Jan. 11 at 8 p.m. in the gymnasium of Belmont senior secondary school, 3085 Jacklin, it was announced today.

A $750,000 referendum in Langford, Colwood and Metchosin was technically defeated earlier this month when Metchosin voters narrowly failed to give the arena the necessary 60 per cent majority. Colwood was 85 per cent in favor and Langford 83 per cent.

Purpose of the meeting is to see if residents want Langford and Colwood to go ahead on their own with the arena or hold a second referendum.

The arena was to be the Centennial 71 project in the Langford, Colwood and Metchosin area.

Pool Won't Be Ready For National Meets

Victoria's new swimming pool won't likely be completed in time for the national swim meets in July, it was learned today.

Construction of the pool in Central Park has been plagued by problems resulting from labor disputes and stoppages of work during the summer.

The last date for completion given in September by project coordinator John DiCastri was June 5, but an informed source now says this date is almost impossible to meet.

The city has been pressed by the B.C. Amateur Swimming Association for confirmation that the pool will be ready in time for practice swimming by June 26.

It was hoped the pool's first weeks of use would include the 1971 Canadian Summer Nationals and the B.C. Centennial '71 International Swim Meet.

The pool was originally scheduled to be completed this week, but following labor problems this summer, the date was put forward to June, and the B.C. swim association was told it could expect use of the pool then.

Now, however, the June 5 date is also doubtful.

Oak Bay Sewage May Be Diverted

The McMicking Point sewer system in Oak Bay may be diverted to the Clover Point outfall when the new Clover Point system is completed.

Victoria city council will be asked in the new year to return its authority over city sewage matters to the Capital Regional District so a study can be made on joining the systems.

The connection would avoid the necessity of building more than one treatment plant in the area.

Victoria is seeking approval from the provincial government for an extension to the Clover Point outfall to be used before and while a treatment plant is built.

The new Clover Point system would also receive sewage that now runs from James Bay into the Inner Harbor and from part of the city into Rock Bay in the Upper Harbor.

Ban Ordered on Deadly Chemistry Sets

Toy chemistry sets containing deadly cyanide crystals have been ordered off the shelves in a Victoria store after having been discovered by an inspector in the federal consumer affairs department.

The sets were found during one of the routine checks made by the department.

The discovery underlines the necessity for the act now being prepared by Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford which will put more teeth into the Hazardous Products Act, passed earlier this year.

The new act will tighten up regulations designed to prevent the importing of dangerous toys.

A Victoria inspector said that a brand of baby rattles was also banned earlier this month.

•

"These were musical rattles that were easily taken apart. When they were opened up we found that inside was a whole bunch of metal spikes around which a small ball rotated in order to create the music."

The federal department has three inspectors based in Victoria.

One is concerned with primary products, such as butter and eggs, along with his duties as food and drug inspector.

A weights and measures inspector checks for inaccuracies in such things as electricity and gas accounting while the third man enforces the Hazardous Products Act.

Supplementing this small staff is Mike Hanson, the provincial government's consumer affairs officer.

The pressure on the four men grows as consumers become more concerned with their rights as consumers.

Hanson explains: "With the consumer revolution, people are waking up. This creates its own problem. The phone calls increase and we find ourselves with neither the staff nor the necessary power to police it."

•

All the major outlets in Victoria have been given a "clean bill of health" regarding the condemned chemistry sets and baby rattles.

But until a law demands a more rigid inspection of imported goods there is always the risk of other dangerous products being put on sale.

Store personnel are as anxious as their customers that the law be passed quickly.

Among them is toy department manager for one of the large stores, Jim Hollier, who has spent 20 years in the toy industry.

"Once the act is passed these things will be checked before they have a chance to reach the shelves. This is a good thing—we must protect our children."

Hollier welcomes the routine checks of the inspectors, who are given full access to the department. "We don't take them on any Russian guided tour."

FERRY RUNS STEPPED UP

British Columbia government ferries will step up their sailing schedules today between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen and Horseshoe Bay and Nanaimo.

The hourly sailings—instead of the present two-hour service—will continue through the holidays to Jan. 3.

Allies Discussed Means of Repelling Russians

LONDON (AP) — Ten months before D-Day, Allied military strategists discussed the possibility of repelling the Russians if they suddenly began overrunning Nazi Germany.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Second World War U.S. chief of staff, asked his British counterpart in August, 1943, if he thought Germany would help Allied troops enter Europe "to repel the Russians."

The quotation came from official minutes of the combined Chiefs of Staff which were made public today in London and Washington.

Sir Alan Brooke, British chief of staff, told Marshall he had been thinking along similar lines. He said, however, that Dr. Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia did not think the Russians would try to sweep over Europe immediately.

The British marshal quoted Dr. Benes as believing Russia would be bled so badly by the war that it would need a few years to get its economy going again.

Marshall commented in a meeting of the chiefs of staff that Russia was turning an "increasingly hostile eye on the capitalist world." The Russians, he said, were becoming increasingly contemptuous of their Western allies.

Although minutes of the meeting did not background the reasons, apparently the Russian view resulted from Allied refusal to invade Europe as soon as Moscow would have liked.

The British chief of staff, while going along with Dr. Benes's view, told Marshall he expected Russia to ask for part of Poland, at least part of the Baltic states and for concessions in the Balkans.

Strategy was based on the belief that Russia would not declare war against Japan, or if it did, then it would be so late the result would be obvious.

The major part of the records of meetings of the Combined Chiefs of Staff, a total of 100,000 documents, was made public today by the British and American governments.

Allied military leaders themselves fought running battles over strategy in Europe.

Time after time, the British sought to pull men and material out of the Pacific to strengthen the planned invasion of Europe but U.S. leaders stubbornly fought back—and won.

Gen. Henry (Hap) Arnold, then chief of the U.S. Army Air Corps, grew so incensed by poor U.S. bombing results from Britain to Europe that he threatened seven months before D-Day—June 6, 1944—to stop the flow of bombers to Britain.

In a report to the Combined Chiefs of Staff in December 1943, Arnold said U.S. planes in other areas put 60 to 70 per cent of their available bombers into the air for operations. The percentage in Britain, he declared, was only 50 per cent.

"There's no reason why they shouldn't send 70 per cent," he added.

Marshall agreed. He said that unless U.S. bombers out of Britain came up to the results of U.S. daylight bombers around the world there was no need for any huge force in Britain.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal of Britain criticized a U.S. proposal to install a supreme air commander in Europe and the Mediterranean. He told the Americans that either the Royal Air Force and the U.S. Air Corps should be led by a combined staff, or one service had to be subservient to the other.

Portal said he was not prepared to recommend that the RAF be under U.S. direction.

Bonfires Signal Distress

LONDON (CP) — For the first time since the Spanish Armada threatened England in 1588, hilltop bonfires blazed across the vale of Aylesbury Sunday. This time residents were signaling alarm at the prospect of four ancient villages being bulldozed to make way for a new airport.

At least 50 huge fires were lit. Two were topped by effigies of Mr. Justice Sir Eustace Roskill, head of a government commission which last week recommended that London's third airport be located in the rustic Buckinghamshire area just northeast of the metropolis.

One action group distributed hundreds of recipes for Molotov cocktails, apparently for use against crews who might begin levelling the communities.

Geoffrey Ginn, a schoolmaster in Stewkley, the biggest village, deprecated the bomb idea. But he touched off a fire under Mr. Justice Roskill's effigy as Stewkley's 1,250 people staged their first traffic jam in history.

"Stewkley's people are reluctant to become violent but they won't be pushed around," Ginn said. "The last time anyone tried to quell the citizens was in the 17th century when the Gregorian calendar was changed and the whole village marched up and down shouting, 'Give me back our lost 10 days.'

"They had to read the Riot Act to stop that."

OTHERS AFFECTED

The villages of Cublington, Dunton and Soulbury also would vanish under the Roskill proposals. But protests may be premature.

The commission's report is only advisory. The body was set up hastily to do some rethinking a couple of years ago when a similar furore erupted over the Labor government's choice of Stansted as the third airport.

The final decision is up to the government, and Peter Walker, minister for the environment, said Sunday all environmental factors will be examined before it is reached.

A large body of opinion leans to Foulness, an island almost right up against a relatively unpopulated area of the Essex coast just north of the Thames estuary. It is on the opposite side of London from the Aylesbury area and about the same 40-mile distance from the centre of the city.

Top Polish Leader Ousted

Food Rioting Forces Purge

Times News Service

WARSAW — Five top members of the Polish government, including leader Wladyslaw Gomulka, have been purged in the wake of widespread riots against a government-ordered boost in food prices.

Calm began to return today to the rebellious cities with the appointment of Edward Gierek as leader of the nation's Communist party.

He immediately began talks to try to straighten out the country's economy.

Gierek has called for a reappraisal "of the ill-considered economic policies" which set off the bloody rioting last week.

Gierek used the phrase "ill-considred" in a speech to a plenary session of the party's central committee Sunday which forced Gomulka to resign after 14 years as party secretary.

The central committee also fired four members of the 12-man ruling politburo, including President Marian Spychalski, who remains, however, as head of state.

Among those dismissed was Boleslaw Jaszczuk, 57, responsible for carrying out economic reforms aimed at modernizing Poland's stagnant economy through a transition to more selective, intensive development of key industries.

Jaszczuk, a former ambassador to Russia, was regarded as the main advocate of sharp pre-Christmas food price increases a week ago, which ignited smouldering resentment over other aspects of the reforms and led to strikes and street clashes in Baltic coastal towns.

Warsaw radio said workers in riot-torn Gdansk and Gdynia had returned to work today but did not mention Szczecin, hit hardest by the disorders. Telephone lines to Gdansk remained down and its airport closed to regular traffic a week after the riots began there.

GIVES PARTY LINE

Troops were believed still occupying Szczecin, and a source reported from Gdansk that tanks were on the streets and a nighttime curfew remained in force. Damage at Gdansk alone was estimated at $3.5 million.

In a radio and television address after his election as new party first secretary, Gierek, a 57-year-old former miner, said the party would give a difficult and self-critical but clear and true answer to the question of how this disaster happened.

Some causes were the result of real difficulties but others were due to "ill-considered conceptions of economic policy" which would have to be removed, he said in what appeared to be an obvious criticism of Jaszczuk.

The burly, crew-cut new

Agnew to Step Down If Better Man Shows

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew says he is willing to step down in 1972 if a vice-presidential candidate comes along with more political appeal, but that President Nixon "gives me every indication that he approves of the courses of action that I have taken."

Agnew made the statement in a copyrighted story by Akron Beacon Jornal writers who talked to him Friday in Akron.

"I'm not an insecure man. I don't worry from day to day whether the president is looking at me with a fishy eye."

Davis Enters Race For Robarts' Post

Times News Services

TORONTO — Education Minister William Davis, 41, today declared his candidacy for the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party and immediately became the favorite to succeed Premier John Robarts.

Robarts earlier announced he will resign at a convention Feb. 10-12.

A powerful, 50-man committee headed by Provincial Treasurer Charles MacNaughton as campaign manager, will support Davis.

The number of legislature members who have already declared openly for Mr. Davis indicates the 11-year veteran of the legislature will be the foremost candidate in the leadership race.

A pleasant-spoken, witty lawyer and former assistant Crown attorney for Peel County, just west of Toronto, Davis has seemed cut out for the premiership since he was first elected in 1959.

He was the youngest member of the legislature—at 30—when he won Peel South for the first time. The riding contains his home and birthplace, Brampton.

Davis became education minister in 1962 and in 1964 was given a second and related portfolio as minister of university affairs.

VICTORIAN DRAWS TICKET ON IRISH

A Victoria person has drawn a ticket on the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes. Nom de plume on the ticket drawn today on the Dec. 28 running of the Sweeps Hurdles was Donamar.

A minimum of $1,060 is awarded to persons whose tickets are drawn. If a ticket is drawn on the horse which places first in the race, the prize is about $120,000.

Clean Air Program Proposed

A province-wide air pollution study commissioned by the provincial government has called for a broad prevention and control program to keep air pollution problems from reaching their "high potential."

Key recommendation appears to be that the attack on air pollution be carried out initially at the provincial level, with regions and municipalities given a share of responsibility later.

MORE RESEARCH

Establishment of air quality standards, a big increase in research, including a province-wide monitoring program, and an effort to find alternatives to burning of municipal and industrial refuse are among the recommendations.

The study, carried out by the B.C. Research Council, was presented to the government last week and is currently under study.

It was commissioned last Jan. 15.

"Air pollution problems do exist in the province of British Columbia and, more importantly, there is high potential for additional pollution problems," the report said.

"The majority of present problems are localized in area and of limited duration and severity; however, continued and rapid growth of some areas in the absence of adequate control measures will create more intense community and regional problems."

HAVE A CHOICE

The report says the provincial government policy faces a choice between an immediate moderate-cost and largely preventive program or costly "more drastic corrective action" in a generation or two when "a more serious and generalized air pollution situation develops."

Lack of information in a number of study areas, including pulp mill air pollution, was cited as a major difficulty in conducting the study.

A central information centre for air pollution is recommended.

LESSER PROBLEM

Not surprisingly, the study concluded that Victoria presents a lesser pollution problem than Vancouver, the other metropolitan area in the province, because of lesser industrial activity and higher prevailing winds.

Vancouver has "an air pollution problem similar to that of San Francisco and Los Angeles but not nearly as severe or continuous throughout the year."

Small cities in a valley location with one or more large industries will have to battle both the large sources of air pollution—frequently "obnoxious odors, soiling corrosive chemical fall-out and reduced visibility"—and also the non-industrial sources because atmospheric inversion in such locations can trap all pollutants and create a problem despite limited population.

The report says that most of the area of the province has virtually no man-made pollution. Forest fires, emission of hydrocarbons from vegetation and wind erosion

Tucson Hotel Fire Kills 28; Youth Held

TUCSON, Ariz. (CP) — Juvenile court petitions were filed today charging a 16-year-old youth with trespass in a $2.5-million fire which killed 28 persons and injured 27 in a downtown hotel Sunday. An arson charge was also filed but later withdrawn pending further investigation.

The youth was taken into custody near the scene of the blaze, and questioned by police.

The petition identified him as Louis C. Taylor, four-time parolee from the State Industrial School for Boys.

Ben Birdsall, Pima County Superior Court juvenile judge, said Taylor "told us a number of different stories about the fire.

"He said he was at the scene and saw the fire start, but claims he saw another boy do it."

Several survivors of the flames which raced through the upper half of the 12-storey Pioneer International Hotel said they had smelled a volatile substance in the corridors.

The fire in the 41-year-old building broke out on the sixth floor and flared through hallways and staircases, penning about 60 persons in their rooms with no way out except through the windows.

One woman plunged to her death from the seventh floor.

"I'm still here—I'm still here!" witnesses said she shouted shortly before making the fatal leap.

The dead in the dawn blaze were mostly wealthy Mexicans and their families who came to Tucson for Christmas shopping.

They were all from Sonora which lies across the border from Arizona 65 miles south of here.

They included the wife and five children of Maj. Francisco Luken, chief of Sonora's state judicial police.

KOREAN SUCCESS STORY is checked by Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, director of the Unitarian Service Committee. Han Ho Ung, 26, lost a leg when he stepped on a land mine. With USC help, Han was trained as a watchmaker and now has his own shop and supports his family well. Help is urgently sought for the USC's Children of Asia Christmas fund. Donations may be mailed or brought to the Times office, 2631 Douglas St.

TORONTO COUPLE WINS SUPER IRISH PRIZE

$486,000 Christmas Gift!

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto couple got the biggest Christmas present of their lives today—$486,000.

Bob and Bessie Jacobs were awakened at 4 a.m. today by a telephone call from Ireland telling them they had won $200,000 as a super prize in the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes.

The prize was for the first ticket drawn out of the sweeps drum. The sweep's jackpot normally is $120,500 for a ticket on the winning horse, but for this race—the Sweeps Hurdles scheduled Dec. 28—a super prize was added.

The super prize will remain a feature of all Irish Sweepstake draws in the future. The new departure is in observance of the 40th anniversary of the draw.

BESSIE JACOBS

The official results of the draw have not yet been released by hospital officials in Ireland, but the Jacobs got the good news by telephone.

Jacobs is a $190-a-week printer and both were numb with shock after receiving the news.

"I can't believe it," said Mrs. Jacobs. "I just can't believe it."

The winning ticket was in her name.

Jacobs said he did not know if he would leave his job.

"We just want to live a normal life," he said.

Mrs. Jacobs, who said she has been buying lottery and sweeps tickets for the last 20 years, was too

Ice Gives Way

BURNS LAKE (CP) — Jeffrey Leo Molinairi, 15, was killed Sunday when the tractor he was operating fell through the ice on an unnamed lake on his family's farm about 15 miles south of here.

Police said the youth was clearing an area for a skating rink when the accident happened.

THE POLISH SCENE

GIEREK
... a liberal

The Washington Post

Edward Gierek, 57, the successor to Wladyslaw Gomulka, was viewed for so long as the coming man of Polish politics that it began to seem as if time was going to pass him by.

Gierek has a reputation as a liberal and as a pragmatic, effective managerial type plus a cast-iron regional position akin to that of an old-fashioned American political boss.

He was the darling of many westerners close to the Polish scene, yet he was largely unknown to the general public in the west. His selection as Gomulka's successor came as a surprise, however, not only because of the dramatic circumstances, but also because of his foreign connections in nationalistic Poland and because Gomulka had apparently become disenchanted with him.

WIDELY FEARED

Whenever Gierek's name was mentioned in analyses of Poland's political future, the alternative was usually the widely feared, authoritarian, nationalist interior minister, Gen. Mieczyslav Moczar, who has often been accused of exploiting traditional Polish xenophobia, particularly anti-Russian and anti-semetic feelings.

Moczar's power base is the leadership of the mass veterans' organization, Zbowid, which groups both communist and non-communist Poles who fought the Nazis.

Since the Soviet army imposed communism on Poland, Gierek is the first top Polish leader who spent the war neither in the Soviet Union nor in the Polish underground.

Gierek's family emigrated to join the large colony of Polish coal miners in the fields of northern France in 1923, when he was only 10 years old. They came from a region which was part of Czarist Russia before Poland regained its independence after the First World War.

WENT TO MINES

Gierek went into the mines at 13. His father died in a mine accident. Gierek joined the French communist party in 1931 and was deported to Poland in 1934 for his role in organizing a sitdown strike.

More than 30 years later, in 1967, French President Charles de Gaulle made a special sidetrip during a state visit to Poland to Gierek's seat of power, Katowice, the capital of the Silesian coal-mining region. It seemed to those who accompanied De Gaulle at the time that he was going out of his way to place France's seal of approval on the deportee.

After his deportation, Gierek served in the Polish army, but got out in time to emigrate again to the west in 1939 before the war's outbreak.

He went to Belgium, and became active as a communist in the Belgian coal mines. His official biography credits him with organizing Polish emigre coalminers in the Belgian resistance to the Nazi occupation. At the end of the war, in 1945, he became head of the Polish section of the Belgian communist party.

RETURNED IN 1948

He finally returned to Poland in 1948 and got a job with the central committee of the Polish party. Soon after, he transferred to Katwocie and started his climb up the hierarchy, studying along the way for an engineering degree from the University of Cracow.

During the De Gaulle visit one of the most striking features of the long ride through coal-dust blackened Silesia was the teutonic, un-Polish self-discipline of Gierek's wards. The region had once been mixed-ethnic.

Poles ironically refer to Gierek's Silesian power base as "the Polish Katanta."

Largely thanks to Gierek's organizational ability, the coal mines, providing Poland's high-quality anthracite coal, are among the few things that work unfailingly in the country. Coal is Poland's leading foreign exchange earner, and Gierek has been able to get his miners higher rations and better pay than any comparable group in Poland.

FALL FROM POWER NO SURPRISE

THE WASHINGTON POST

Wladyslaw Gomulka's fall from power in Warsaw came as less of a surprise to his fellow Poles than to Westerners who remembered him for his brief liberal period in 1956 when he stood up to the Soviet Union.

Then he faced down an infuriated Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, whose answer to Gomulka's demand for an end to total Soviet control of Poland was to surround Warsaw with Soviet armor.

But as the years passed, Gomulka proved that his "Polish road to socialism" was no threat to Soviet predominance. His loyalty was rewarded with the place of honor—next to Soviet party boss Leonid I. Brezhnev—at state occasions in Moscow in recent years.

An archetypal eastern European communist of the pre-Second World War school, Gomulka basically never wavered in his dedication to Moscow.

Poles who in 1956 looked on him as a nationalist hero ready to free Poland from communism—or at least from Moscow's dictates—soured gradually, but sour they did.

Ruthless, dull, ascetic, Gomulka was as untypically Polish in his own way as de Gaulle was untypical of the French. More at home over a beer at his modest house watching television than partaking in the more traditional Polish pastimes of women and vodka, Gomulka represented that fast-disappearing race—the clandestine communist typical of the hunted years before communism came to eastern Europe.

He never mastered the problems of the industrialized and materially demanding nation, which Poland had become at tremendous cost under communist rule.

Unpretentious, steely-eyed, bald and dull, Gomulka was a past master at playing off ascendant liberals against discredited Stalinists, then using moderates to oust the liberals, then nationalists to counterbalance the moderates.

Over the years his name ceased to be a symbol of hope for Poland or other Soviet satellites to the point that a Czech intellectual early in 1968 said privately he prayed that the then emerging Prague freedom bid could avoid "Gomulkaization."

Anti-U.S. Fury On Okinawa May Hurt Pact

By SELIG S. HARRISON
The Washington Post

TOKYO — The anti-American mob fury that burst out at Kadena Air Force Base in Okinawa Sunday came as the climax to a month of growing tension between island residents and U.S. military commanders.

The GI who allegedly ran over an Okinawan with his car and left the victim lying in the street offered the crowning symbol to the people of the pleasure city of Koza, of what they view as an arrogant "occupation" mentality. (See also Page 27).

More than 1,000 persons stormed into the air base, set fire to 83 cars and battled with U.S. troops in one of the most serious outbreaks of violence since the U.S. captured the island in the closing days of the Second World War.

What made the incident particularly explosive was the simmering resentment in Okinawa over a similar case earlier this month in which an Okinawan woman died and the U.S. serviceman involved got off lightly at the hands of a military court after the U.S. refused to turn him over to Okinawan authorities. Japanese Foreign Minister Kkiichi Aichi told angry Diet members that Japan "could not understand or accept" the light sentence.

GAS NOT REMOVED

Another focus of tension on Okinawa has been the continuing delay in the promised removal of U.S. nerve gas stored on the island. An announcement last week that a scheduled removal in January would cover only part of the gas stored on the island touched off widespread protests.

Okinawans and Japanese generally were outraged that the U.S. military policeman who showed up at the scene of the accident Sunday allegedly paid no attention to the victim before rushing off in pursuit of the hit-and-run driver.

The case almost completely blanketed prime television news time in Japan Sunday night as excited commentators broadcasting from the scene interviewed the Okinawan "man in the street" and bitterly condemned a statement on the accident attributed to the U.S. high commissioner in the Ryukyu Islands, Gen. James Lampert.

According to the Japanese TV networks, Lampert offered no apology for the accident, declaring only that he "wondered whether disturbances to the peace such as we have witnessed this morning help to solve any of our problems."

Japanese radio and TV accounts said that an estimated 800 U.S. troops confronted an Okinawa crowd tha t grey to 5,000 in the predawn hours.

After initially firing tear-gas shells, these accounts stated, the U.S. troops fired rifle shots into the air to frighten the crowd and eventually fired at the rioters, injuring 14 Okinawan civilians. Twenty nine American soldiers and five Okinawan policemen who helped the U.S. forces were also reported injured.

Observers here speculated that the incident could have a significant impact on negotiations now under way between Japan and the U.S. looking to the return of Okinawa and the other Ryukyuan Islands.

President Nixon has pledged the return of the Ryukyus by 1972 in a meeting with Prime Minister Sato, but this was conditional on detailed negotiations and approval by the legislatures of the two countries.

No Danger To Passengers

MONTREAL (CP)—Passengers aboard an Air France 747 which landed here Sunday with a cracked windscreen panel were never in any danger, a spokesman for the airline said.

"There are two or three layers of glass and plastic in a 747 windscreen and only one of the panels cracked," assistant local manager Blaise Russaouen said.

He added that there was no need to reduce speed or altitude but safety regulations dictate no planes should take off in that condition.

The Paris-Montreal-Chicago flight was halted here and pasengers were put aboard other scheduled planes for Chicago.

TRUST NOBODY

That's a Jungle Yonder, Dearie

By Jack Scott

Somewhere in our town today there's a lonely widow in her late fifties or early sixties, a woman with a nice little financial nest-egg or maybe a nice big one, who had better plan right now on making a firm and fast New Year's resolution.

It would go more or less like this: "I will trust no one, I will be suspicious of every man, however nice or honest a face he may have, until I am convinced of his integrity—and even then I will be suspicious as all hell. Above all, I will sign nothing in 1971."

It's too late now for the dear old thing who signed up for $5,000 in lessons on how to do the tango and samba, or the nice trusting girl who was promised the 30 per cent return in that certain mutual fund and saw every last dime disappear, or the charming old thing who believed it when the man volunteered to fix her chimney for $30 and somehow the bill ballooned to $3,000.

Scott

The lonely Victoria widow who has yet to be had — and won't be, hopefully, if she hews to her new year's resolution — will be taking the advice of a man who, every working day of his life, is reminded of the terrible vulnerability of our town's older folks as the prey of petty larcenists, franchised pirates, hard-sell gimmick artists, soft-sell con men and assorted other fast-buck bandits.

As manager of Vancouver Island's Better Business Bureau since its inception eight years ago, W. D. "Bill" Tindall, a handsome, silvering, 49-year-old man trying hard to hold on to his illusions, has seen first hand the tragedy that's wrought by the corrupting two per cent of the population that's dedicated to fleecing the remaining 98 per per cent. It's a tragedy particularly heart-breaking when the victims are ancient.

"We're unique in this because we're a retirement city, a Mecca for the old who have the money to come here and those who follow them to relieve them of it," Tindall sighs. "In today's society it is the older person who is the most trusting, the most-swindle-prone. Statistically the widows outnumber the men — women, usually, without practical experience in handling money — and they're the most susceptible of all."

★ ★ ★

In terms of sheer money volume the bulk of the loot goes to what Tindall describes as "the self-styled business advisor or counsellor." The good name of reputable investment companies and the policing of the superintendent of securities are meaningless when the lone operator may freely identify himself as "an investment broker," promise a return of anything from 18 to 30 per cent and let the covetous nature of man take its course.

Item: A Victorian hands over $8,000, as first mortgage money, paying 12 per cent, collectable monthly, to a man who describes himself as "a realtor." He decides, too late, to have a title search on the property. He is fifth in line in the list of suckers who hold first mortgages. Unexpectedly, the property is sold to wind up an estate. Only two of the victims recover their money. The "realtor" has disappeared.

"The frightening thing," says Bill Tindall, "is that for every such case that surfaces there are anywhere from 15 to 20 that don't. Older people, particularly, have too much pride to admit to an act of stupidity. For that reason, all we see of the swindles is the tip of the iceberg and, God knows, the tip is impressive enough."

Less in the big money category, but equally insidious, is the gimmick of dance studios and social clubs that appeal directly to the lonely widow.

Tindall: "There is the handsome male instructor, just as you'd expect, telling the poor dear what talent she has, how wonderful she's doing in the introductory lesson, and before they know it, they've signed on the dotted line for as many as four overlapping contracts to the extent of $3,000 or more. The record — that we know of! — is a woman nearly 60 years of age who found herself with $5,000 in lessons on a signed, unbreakable contract."

In the Bureau's files at this red hot moment is the case of a woman who paid $2,200 in advance for 180 weeks of lessons. When she failed to receive a receipt for her money she went to the manager. For bookkeeping purposes, said he, the money was in a separate account. But if she would give him a further $2,800 he would give her a promissory note for $5,500, repayable in three months at eight per cent interest. Incredibly, she did. The note was written on the ornate letterhead of a company that doesn't exist. It didn't matter. The lad was long gone once the cheque was cashed.

★ ★ ★

Then there are the social clubs, the lonely-heart gathering places where the two-dollar registration fee may suddenly get to be a signed-up $240, three out of four of the other lonely hearts are also hopeful widows and the net result of the investment is to be exposed, at their own expense, to the predators. (One such club, with a $20 registration fee, guarantees a date with a compatible, eligible bachelor and they fulfill the contract, too, except, it seems, that it's the same, tired bachelor who handles them all.)

Ah, but you needn't go out to be taken. Just wait right there at home. They'll come to you.

"Each winter it's the same," Tindall explains with a trace of weariness. "The so-called home-improvement contractors leave the prairie ice and snow to come here and work a new territory, then drift back again when the summer comes. The pitch is always the same. The fellow has seen that your chimney could use a little work. Would you like him to look at it? He comes down with a handful of loose mortar, tells you it's dangerous, could be fixed for only $30. That begins it. He finds that the whole roof needs to be replaced, the downspouts are shot, the field tile has gone and quite sensible people find themselves with a $4,000 commitment that began at $30. The work, needed or not, is never done. If you can find him he'll tell you that he never said when he'd do it. But you rarely find him or the money that went with him."

Another dandy, also an elusive itinerant, is the man with the magic spray "sealing solution" to rid the roof of moss. Usual price: $75. Usual result: A lifetime mess of oil, tar and gasoline. One man with an old truck can handle a house per hour with five dollars worth of magic spray per house and retire to parts unknown with a handsome profit and the certainty that no one will catch up with him.

Bill Tindall will tell you that the city licence laws should be tightened up to squeeze out the incompetent and the known dishonest, but that's unlikely so long as licensing is more a revenue-producer than a protector.

Meanwhile, his advice, to young and old alike, is just this: "Love the human race and be on your guard at all times."

BECAUSE OF BUSINESS POSITIONS

Some Have More Votes Than Others

100 Victorians Hold Privilege

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

There is no ceiling on the number of votes a person may cast in a municipal election.

It is theoretically possible for 50 people to cast 1,000 ballots without breaking the law.

The only limitation is the number of corporations in which a man or woman is a prominent figure, and is chosen as the corporation's voter.

In other words, the more influential positions in business a man holds, the more votes he is likely to control.

This is borne out by the 1970-71 voters list for the municipality of Victoria, which contains more than 100 examples of people with two votes or more.

There are at least 100 electors with two votes, four with three votes, two with four votes and one man who can cast five ballots.

The man with the most votes in a Victoria election is G. J. Stewart, who lives in Oak Bay at 3145 Sheringham.

He is the designated voting agent for Associated Building credits Ltd., Chemainus Properties Ltd., Hiview Investments Ltd., Stewart and Hudson Ltd., and Parkside Towers Ltd.

The two men with four votes each are H. B. Elworthy and G. I. Edgelow. Elworthy may vote as an owner-elector as well as agent for Island Tug and Barge, Princess Mary Restaurant, and the Imperial Inn.

Edgelow can vote as a tenant-elector and as agent for T. Admark Ltd., Current Events Publishing Ltd., and Farm News Ltd.

Eric Charman, 1632 Rockland, can vote as a resident from that address and once each for Charman Pacific Realty Ltd. and General Mortgage Corp. Ltd.

H. Lou Poy may vote as an owner-elector and as agent for Hook Sin Tong Charity, and Pioneer Fruit and Vegetable Co. Ltd.

K. King can vote as agent for these three companies: Maple Room Catering Service, Hotel Douglas Co. Ltd., and Pandora Enterprises.

G. B. Mackenzie, 1551 Rockland, can vote once as an owner-elector and once each for the Royal Bank of Canada and Globe Realty Corp. which is a wholly owned subsidiary of the bank.

Too Much Legal Paperwork

W. C. Mearns, 3245 Beach Drive in Oak Bay, can vote in Victoria as a property owner and as agent for the British Columbia Electric Company which was taken over by the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority early in the 1960s.

Changing the titles over, says Victoria solicitor Terry O'Grady would involve a prohibitive amount of legal paperwork.

G. S. Wallace is included in the Victoria voting list as both tenant-elector and owner-elector with the address given as 1494 Fairfield.

Similarly, Robert W. Chard is listed as an owner-elector with the address given as 131-645 Fort, and as tenant elector, the given address being 645 Fort.

A man may not vote twice on the strength of two separately owned properties. In the Greater Victoria School District, however, there is no consolidated voting list. This means that on election day, an Oak Bay property owner could go to his Oak Bay polling station and cast votes for both Oak Bay Council and the school board, which this year began electing trustees at large from the four core municipalities.

The man might then proceed to a Victoria polling station to cast votes for Victoria aldermen on the strength of property ownership in that city or delegated voting authority from one or more corporations.

Along with the aldermanic ballots he would automatically receive another set of ballots for the school board.

There is no guard against this voting outside of a deterrent fine. The voter is expected to "declare" that he has already voted for the school board candidates.

The best and safest way to get lots of ballots into the ballot box, however, is to seek out men with several delegated voting rights.

If a man running for office in a large city wanted to campaign efficiently, he would spend his time persuading the most influential businessmen that he was a good choice. If he found 50 men who were agents for 20 companies each, or 100 men who were agents for 10 companies each, he might attract a valuable 1,000 votes. In the recent municipal election, candidate Alfred Hood needed only 15 more votes than he received to overtake Tom Christie and win an aldermanic seat.

If Hood had concentrated his campaign on 100 men who hold more than one vote in Victoria, he might have gone the distance.

Highway Claims Woman

A 26-year-old Saanich woman became the ninth Patricia Bay Highway fatality in 14 months early Sunday morning.

Mrs. Winnifred Nimmo, of 3262 Shelley Street, was killed at about 1:50 a.m. when her small car left the highway and slammed into a power pole.

She was driving south on the Pat Bay in the region of Amity Drive when the accident occurred.

Mrs. Nimmo was at least the 17th person to die on the highway since 1964. Accurate statistics concerning road deaths on the Pat Bay Highway have never been compiled, says the Capital Region Safety Council, but Times files show a total of eight deaths in 1964 and nine in 1969-70.

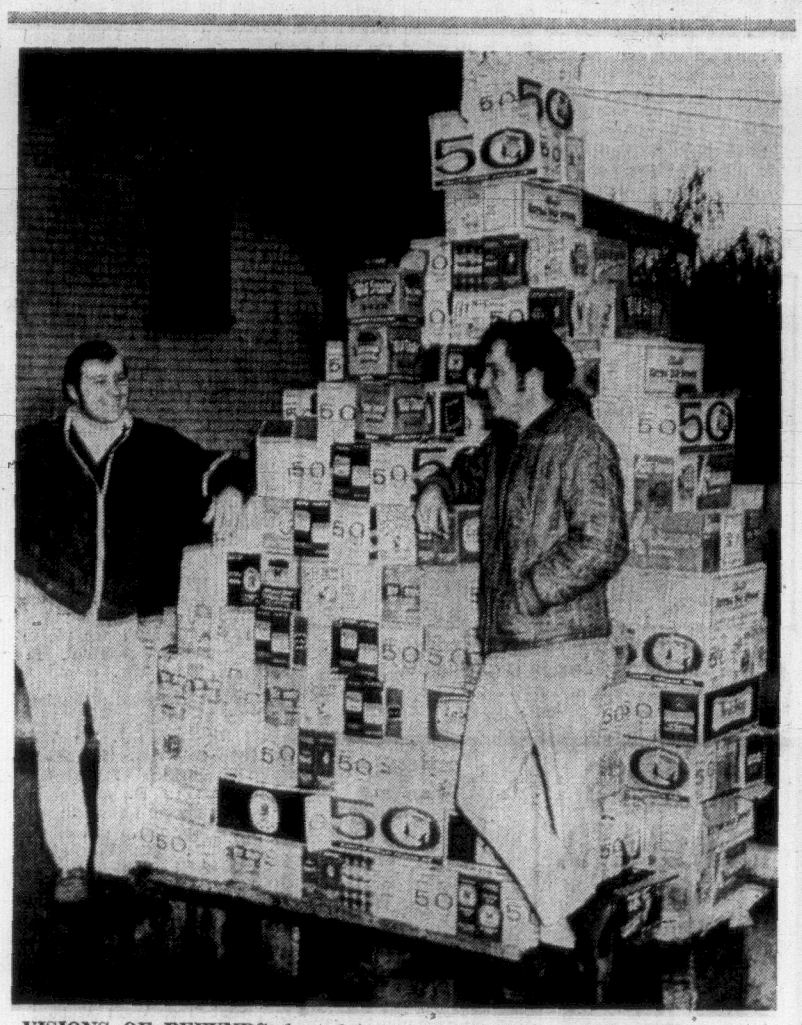
Such statistics are available in the files of the three police departments which have jurisdiction over varying stretches of the highway but have never been compiled.

CRITICAL CONDITION

After another weekend accident, Ian Hawkes Frost, 62, of 1065 Burdett, was in critical condition today at St. Joseph's Hospital when the car he was driving collided with another at 4 p.m. Sunday at Wildwood and Ross.

His passenger, Maria Kolodensky, 48, of 1065 Burdett, was in good condition today with rib injuries.

Police said Frost was driving east on Ross when he collided with a car driven by Grant A. Mebs, 1320 Dallas. Mebs was not injured.



VISIONS OF REFUNDS danced in their heads while Jim Crawford and Dave Paterson of 1056 Foul Bay Rd. waited Saturday for the truck to haul the empties away. The 204 dozen beer bottles represent their consumption and that of a friend since about last July. Apart from a prodigious thirst, mountain of beer cases marks a catholic taste. There are 12 brands represented. (Irving Strickland Photo)

Bunn Charge Wrong Counters City Engineer

City engineer Jim Garnett today accused school trustee Peter Bunn of making "erroneous" statements about government stupidity concerning sewer connections that increased costs at Burnside Elementary.

Bunn, chairman of the school board's building and grounds committee and a contractor himself, cited two examples of city bungling which he said cost ratepayers an extra $1,800 for sewer work.

Despite earlier approval by city engineers of sewer and storm drain connections, the plumbing inspector demanded a change in design and the subsequent increase in drain size cost an additional $800 for a distribution centre being built near Burnside Elementary.

He also charged the city told architects about a sewer that turned out to be non-existent and an extra sewer connection cost $400.

"His statements are quite erroneous," Garnett said.

"I think Mr. Bunn should do his homework before he makes such statements."

Garnett said a school board architect's error which neglected to take into consideration private property in the area led to a request that sewer pipe be laid at a different level to avoid excess excavation of rock.

To lay the pipe and still comply with regulations a new size of pipe was required.

He said the school board was "warned both verbally and in writing" of the possibility that another sewer connection might not exist. It was decided to go ahead on the chance that it might be there, and when it wasn't a standard connection was made.

Bunn originally said aimlessness and indecision by the province were also responsible for increases totalling more than $50,000 at Braefoot and Vic West schools.

"I'm sure that if I sat down and added them all up, the bill for stupidity in the past two years would be well over $100,000." Bunn said.

He said the school board, however, "really quite an efficient body of people, is being made to look silly by senior levels of government."

Meet Date On Arena Scheduled

A public meeting will be held in three weeks to set the course for an arena in Langford-Colwood.

The meeting will be held Monday Jan. 11 at 8 p.m. in the gymnasium of Belmont senior secondary school, 3085 Jacklin, it was announced today.

A $750,000 referendum in Langford, Colwood and Metchosin was technically defeated earlier this month when Metchosin voters narrowly failed to give the arena the necessary 60 per cent majority. Colwood was 85 per cent in favor and Langford 83 per cent.

Purpose of the meeting is to see if residents want Langford and Colwood to go ahead on their own with the arena or hold a second referendum.

The arena was to be the Centennial 71 project in the Langford, Colwood and Metchosin area.

Pool Won't Be Ready For National Meets

Victoria's new swimming pool won't likely be completed in time for the national swim meets in July, it was learned today.

Construction of the pool in Central Park has been plagued by problems resulting from labor disputes and stoppages of work during the summer.

The last date for completion given in September by project coordinator John DiCastri was June 5, but an informed source now says this date is almost impossible to meet.

The city has been pressed by the B.C. Amateur Swimming Association for confirmation that the pool will be ready in time for practice swimming by June 26.

It was hoped the pool's first weeks of use would include the 1971 Canadian Summer Nationals and the B.C. Centennial '71 International Swim Meet.

The pool was originally scheduled to be completed this week, but following labor problems this summer, the date was put forward to June, and the B.C. swim association was told it could expect use of the pool then.

Now, however, the June 5 date is also doubtful.

Oak Bay Sewage May Be Diverted

The McMicking Point sewer system in Oak Bay may be diverted to the Clover Point outfall when the new Clover Point system is completed.

Victoria city council will be asked in the new year to return its authority over city sewage matters to the Capital Regional District so a study can be made on joining the systems.

The connection would avoid the necessity of building more than one treatment plant in the area.

Victoria is seeking approval from the provincial government for an extension to the Clover Point outfall to be used before and while a treatment plant is built.

The new Clover Point system would also receive sewage that now runs from James Bay into the Inner Harbor and from part of the city into Rock Bay in the Upper Harbor.

Ban Ordered on Deadly Chemistry Sets

Toy chemistry sets containing deadly cyanide crystals have been ordered off the shelves in a Victoria store after having been discovered by an inspector in the federal consumer affairs department.

The sets were found during one of the routine checks made by the department.

The discovery underlines the necessity for the act now being prepared by Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford which will put more teeth into the Hazardous Products Act, passed earlier this year.

The new act will tighten up regulations designed to prevent the importing of dangerous toys.

A Victoria inspector said that a brand of baby rattles was also banned earlier this month.

•

"These were musical rattles that were easily taken apart. When they were opened up we found that inside was a whole bunch of metal spikes around which a small ball rotated in order to create the music."

The federal department has three inspectors based in Victoria.

One is concerned with primary products, such as butter and eggs, along with his duties as food and drug inspector.

A weights and measures inspector checks for inaccuracies in such things as electricity and gas accounting while the third man enforces the Hazardous Products Act.

Supplementing this small staff is Mike Hanson, the provincial government's consumer affairs officer.

The pressure on the four men grows as consumers become more concerned with their rights as consumers.

Hanson explains: "With the consumer revolution, people are waking up. This creates its own problem. The phone calls increase and we find ourselves with neither the staff nor the necessary power to police it."

•

All the major outlets in Victoria have been given a "clean bill of health" regarding the condemned chemistry sets and baby rattles.

But until a law demands a more rigid inspection of imported goods there is always the risk of other dangerous products being put on sale.

Store personnel are as anxious as their customers that the law be passed quickly.

Among them is toy department manager for one of the large stores, Jim Hollier, who has spent 20 years in the toy industry.

"Once the act is passed these things will be checked before they have a chance to reach the shelves. This is a good thing—we must protect our children."

Hollier welcomes the routine checks of the inspectors, who are given full access to the department. "We don't take them on any Russian guided tour."

FERRY RUNS STEPPED UP

British Columbia government ferries will step up their sailing schedules today between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen and Horseshoe Bay and Nanaimo.

The hourly sailings—instead of the present two-hour service—will continue through the holidays to Jan. 3.

Second Generation Blacks in Britain Bent on Changes

By JULIET FLINT

LONDON (AP) — A new Black Panther party is raising a dissident head in Britain. Police expect a crunch from second-generation non-white immigrants who want action against poverty and prejudice in contrast to the "passive fatalism" often ascribed to their parents.

The Black Panthers are hell-bent on revolution, one of their followers says, in the conviction that power cedes nothing without demand. But revolution, they say, takes time.

★ ★ ★

Many of the immigrants are blacks of West Indian ancestry. The Panthers have attracted other non-whites, including Asians.

"We see ourselves less as Africans or Indians in English society, and more as blacks in a white society," said one Panther, saying he speaks for Asian members as well as blacks.

The movement has begun to organize nationally and is linked to other militant groups in the Black People's Alliance. Foremost among these are the Black Unity and Freedom party, a youth-oriented Marxist group, and the Black Eagles, a grass-roots "commando" group.

The Panthers draw their strongest support from Notting Hill and Brixton, Hackney and New Cross where large immigrant populations complicate already severe social problems.

Police deny racial tension is increasing significantly in these areas. But a Panther news sheet says the situation has been "charged with explosion" since Aug. 9, when 14 Panthers were arrested and charged with riotous assembly.

Police admit isolated instances of harassment, but deny any concerted campaign is afoot to wipe out Panther leadership.

★ ★ ★

Immigrants are deeply concerned by the hostility of many non-white youths toward their parents.

"We are fighting a losing battle," says West Indian journalist Vince Hines. "We're telling the kids, no time for hate, but at the same time the environment is working against us."

Panthers argue that attention to individual problems in no way alleviates the sufferings of the mass of black people. Their program focuses on cultural and political education, to spotlight grievances and build a sense of community as a prelude to revolution.
